Russia's Secret Radio
Britain's Happy Family
Capper's Silver Dollar
He Wanted a Mortgage

By Arthur Brisbane

REBELLIONS, sullen half-mutiny, in their navy made the British feel that the national ship was sinking. It is unwise to offend army, navy or police, for all three can strike back.

The American Bar Association denouncing prohibition and urging modification of the [illegible]an law are wise. Prohi[illegible] encourages crime, the Sh[illegible]man act discourages business.

New York's police know that Russia has on Manhattan Island a secret radio plant. Messages have been intercepted and sent to Washington to be decoded. Translating Russian is hard enough. Decoding it must be very difficult. Detectives suspect that a message to Stalin reading something like ya vas loublou may mean "down with capitalism ingrate."

Mussolini is expected to visit the Pope today. If he does it will be the first time an Italian premier has entered the Vatican in more than 60 years.

It is announced that Mussolini will dismiss an important official to whom the Pope objects and the latter will dismiss from his post one to whom Mussolini objects. But harmony is not complete.

You saw the "happy family" at the circus—cat, dog, white rat and rabbit all in one cage. In the British cabinet is a stranger mixture — Socialist-Labor Toryism, Conservative, Liberalism — all sitting and governing side by side. It is like that picture of the flood with savage animals floating down stream together all too frightened to fight. And most strange, British bankers demand that MacDonald, Socialist-Labor man, shall remain at the head of the government for at least two years more. "Don't disturb the patient" is their advice.

Present conditions will make many "real estaters" appreciate Mr. B. Forman's story about a colored gentleman who bought a house and at last made his final payment. "That's fine," said the seller, "now I shall give you a deed to the property." But that was not the buyer's idea. "No, boss," said he, "I don't want a deed. I want a mortgage. A friend of mine had a mortgage and he got the house and he is living in it now. I have no use for a deed."

There is no good time to buy real estate or stocks if you don't know WHAT to buy. But this is the best possible time to buy real estate or stocks IF YOU DO know what to buy.

Senator Capper of Kansas in his Capper's Magazine tells of a newspaper reporter "who offered to each of eight men a good silver dollar for 60 cents and found no takers." You couldn't fool those eight men if you offered a dollar for 60 cents—it must be a counterfeit without another look.

Senator Capper remarked that the eight men could easily have been persuaded to buy some worthless oil stock, mining stock or "business corner lot deep under water." Many of our sorrows are based on the German saying, "gegen dummheit kaempfen goetter selbst vergebens"—"against stupidity the gods themselves fight in vain."

Mr. Gerard Swope, who proposed a carefully thought out plan to improve industrial conditions and stabilize employment, has had several surprises and will have more. He learns that Senator Brookhart of Iowa knows more about industry than Mr. Swope knows. Swope wouldn't tell Brookhart how to run Iowa politics but Brookhart can and does tell Swope how to run industry off hand without thinking about it for five minutes. THAT IS GENIUS. Gen. Atterbury, head of the Pennsylvania railroad, employing tens of thousands of workers, indorses Mr. Swope's suggestions and will co-operate.

Those with modest incomes enough to live simply should have in mind the possibilities of California. This is said with thorough knowledge of the attractions and opportunities of older territory in which the writer lives. At present in California you can buy chickens for 65 cents apiece—NOT SIXTY-FIVE CENTS A POUND—you buy turkeys for $2.50 each and fruit for so little you can hardly believe it. For instance, a half bushel of oranges for 25 cents. Eggs are cheap. You can live all year round without heating your house. Rents are low but don't go to California looking for work. Go only if you can take enough money with you to live decently.

SLAYER OF WIFE CAPTURED

WALSH HIDING IN LODGING HOUSE

Michael J. Walsh, 50, who is alleged to have killed his wife at their home in Roach st., Dorchester, yesterday afternoon by slashing her throat with a razor, was found and arrested today in a lodging house on West Springfield st., South End.

His arrest came while police were searching for him on the waterfront in the belief he would try to stow away aboard an outgoing ship.

Information that a man who looked like Walsh was in the rooming house was given to Patrolman Hodges of station 11, Fields Corner.

Hodges went to Station 5, East Dedham st., and from there to the house with Special Officer Dooley. They found Walsh in a drunken stupor in an upper room.

He was taken to headquarters and Inspector James Dennessey, homicide expert, was called in to question him.

Walsh killed his wife because she tried to have him brought into court on non-support charges. He pursued her into a neighbor's house on Roach st., Dorchester, slashed her throat and escaped from his 15-year-old son, who gave chase.

WILDER, KIN OF COOLIDGE, DIES

Plymouth Notch, Vt., Sept 19 (Ins)—John J. Wilder, aged uncle of former President Calvin Coolidge died today following a short illness.

Wilder, a picturesque figure during and after the Coolidge administration, was 85 years old. He is survived by his wife, who is a sister to the former President's mother, three daughters and two sons.

"Uncle John" Wilder was born and resided here his entire life.

"Uncle John" appeared in Boston in the winter of 1925, when old-time fiddling contests were sweeping the country like a craze.

During his engagement here he played for Governor Alvan T. Fuller at the State House, and later went to Wayside Inn in Sudbury, where he played a dozen tunes of yesteryear for Henry Ford.

Years ago he was the leader of Wilder's Band which earned a State-wide reputation in Vermont. For well over half a century he played the fiddle at dances in his home state and his friends sought to arrange a contest between their favorite and "Mellie" Dunham, fiddling protege of Henry Ford.

He let it be known, too, that the boyish feet of Calvin oftentimes slipped and slid a bit to the dulcet strains of "Uncle John's" rhythmic fiddle.

2 INJURED AT BLAZE IN SOUTH END

$20,000 Loss by Three-Alarm Fire That Sweeps Plant of Plumbing Firm

A $20,000 three-alarm fire today swept the plant of the Daly Plumbing Supply Co. in Cummings st., South End, endangering nearby lumber yards and building supplies concerns, and injuring two firemen.

They were James Costello and James Regan. Each suffered cuts on their hands.

The blaze originated in the storeroom in the rear of the office, and was through the roof when the fire apparatus arrived.

Three alarms were turned in because of the danger to adjacent buildings.

Miss Agnes Sweeney, a bookkeeper, discovered the fire and turned in the first alarm.

ALL TRAFFIC BLOCKED

With her in the building were five other employes, all of whom fled.

Fire apparatus filled the narrow street, blocking traffic for several blocks each way. Street cars in Southampton street were rerouted for more than an hour. Telephone and electric light lines were melted and fell to the street.

Most of the apparatus was used to safeguard the adjacent buildings. Streams of water drenched the huge lumber yard of Waldo Bros., adjoining the Daly firm in the rear.

VISITORS SEE REAL ACTION

The firemen worked under the direction of Commissioner McLaughlin and Chief Fox. With them were several visiting fire chiefs from Middle West cities, in Boston to study the methods of the Boston department.

Hard fighting confined the flames to the Daly premises, although the wind threatened to spread the fire through the district.

Lacey described him as about 18, with fiery red hair, clad in a red sweater and dark trousers.

By Boston Evening American Special Correspondent

New York, Sept. 18—Out of the fog of mystery shot through with the pale lightnings of suspicion in the Collings murder mystery, new and sensational developments emerged today, as crazy, as erratic and as weird in their implications as have been all the other developments in the investigation.

The principal disclosures are:

1—A wounded man sat in the darkness beside a road at Huntington bay, while two other men, in an automobile, looked for him.

2—Thirty-six hours later, two men answering to descriptions of Collings' murderers, came ashore from a big selling canoe at the beach at Caumsett, where the body of Collings later was found.

3—The Collings family has engaged private detectives to work on the case in the hope of speeding the solution of the mystery.

4—Mrs. Collings is left almost destitute. There is little, and under the law two-thirds goes to Barbara, five-year-old daughter. The child has not been told her father is dead.

CHINA WARNS JAPAN TO CEASE ALL HOSTILITIES

MORE TROOPS RUSHED BY MIKADO

Walled City of Mukden, Capital of Manchuria, Falls in Battle

Nanking, China, Sept. 19 (AP)—Foreign Minister C. T. Wang today dispatched a note demanding immediate cessation of hostilities in Mukden on the part of Japanese troops and immediate withdrawal of all Japanese troops to their original positions. The note was given to Japanese Minister Shigemitsu for transmission to Tokio.

Tokio, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Japanese cabinet in an extraordinary session today decided to take the utmost measures to localize hostilities in Manchuria between Chinese and Japanese forces [illegible]h resulted in the seiz[illegible]ukden.

O[illegible] reinforce the 12,000 Jap[illegible] troops in the Mukden zone [illegible] issued by Japanese military [illegible]horities and troops were started in that direction from Korea and Dairen. An air squadron was reported moving from Korea toward Mukden and Japanese naval officers were ordered to be ready for emergency duty.

Japanese troops seized the walled city of Mukden, capital of Manchuria, today after a bloody clash with Chinese soldiers.

The clash, growing out of trouble which had been brewing for several weeks between the Nationals of the two countries in Manchuria, Korea and elsewhere, precipitated military and naval activity in Japan.

Peitaying, a suburb of Mukden, was the scene of the principal fighting. A Japanese war department communique here said the fighting started when Chinese troops attempted to destroy a bridge of the South Manchurian Railway there.

BATTLE REPORTED

The railway, which is controlled by the Japanese government, traverses Chinese territory, but operates in a treaty zone protected by Japanese troops.

Japanese reports said about 200 Chinese first attacked Japanese soldiers at Peitaying late Friday night. Repulsed, the Chinese returned with reinforcements and severe fighting ensued, according to the Japanese report. The Chinese were driven off. Later fighting was reported from other places around Mukden.

Seoul, Korea, reported the movement of a Japanese air squadron to the border 125 miles from Mukden and other planes were said to be ready for use.

Japanese naval officials decided to send vessels from the Sasebo base to Kiushiu Island, near the Chinese coast, should an emergency arise.

The cottage in which the shooting occurred is behind a three-story apartment house, on the middle floor of which Swieg and his wife and two-year-old daughter lived.

GALLO PINS HIS HOPES ON ELY

With the shadow of the electric chair creeping ever nearer, Samuel Gallo today pinned his hopes on a review of his case to be held next Wednesday before Gov. Ely.

Gallo was scheduled to die during the week of July 27 for the murder of Joseph Fantasia in the North End four years ago.

Cero Gangi, now in Italy, was first convicted of the crime, but was later freed after a joint trial in which Gallo was convicted. When he exhibited signs of unbalanced mentality last July, Gallo was removed to Bridgewater State Farm for a study of his mental condition.

Atty. Vincent Garro expects to have a large group of witnesses at the State House on Wednesday to testify as to Gallo's innocence.

WORLD RELIEF IS DISCUSSED BY HOOVER

Stimson, Mellon and Lamont Join Economic Parley Called at White House

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service Correspondent

Washington, Sept. 19—An unannounced conference for the relief of the international economic depression was held by President Hoover in the White House last night.

Those present were:

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, and Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont.

The President summoned his cabinet colleagues for dinner and afterwards had a long conference. While the White House would make no comment whatever, it was learned they were called in to consider some emergency measures for the relief of Great Britain's serious economic problem, possible revision of war debt agreements, and the American foreign trade balance, which for the first time in years has slumped to an unfavorable status.

FOREIGN TRADE SLUMPS

Throughout the two years of depression until the current season, even in the face of a steadily diminishing foreign trade, the United States has succeeded in maintaining a favorable balance.

The last monthly report, issued by the Commerce Department this week, however, disclosed an excess of imports over exports in the money value of America's international trade.

It is this phase of the situation which accounted for the presence of Secretary Lamont.

RELIEF IS STUDIED.

It is understood the conferees also took up the question of immediate renewal of informal conferences with France and Great Britain, and possibly Germany, to determine if something could not be done to give greater relief to international financing than President Hoover's one-year debt suspension plan has done.

2 HURT IN RUM CHASER BLAST

Saunderstown, R. I., Sept. 19—Two Coast Guards were hurled overboard and another was slightly injured when the patrol boat, CG-2343, was wrecked in an explosion at the Jamestown ferry wharf here late last night.

Boatswain's Mate Michael Makin was taken to the South County Hospital suffering from burns and severe bruises.

Makin was one of the two men flung overboard by the blast. Surfman Joseph King, the other, also was burned and bruised but his injuries did not require hospital attention.

Surfman Lincoln P. Vaughn, the other member of the crew, had left the engine room a short time before the explosion, and was warping the 36-foot craft when the blast came. He received slight bruises when he was flung upon the dock.

According to coast guard officials at Newport, the explosion resulted from a flooded carburetor. The boat was wrecked.

BRIDE DIETS 69 POUNDS OFF WHITEMAN

Mary Livingstone's Insistence on "No Starch" Thins Down Jazz King in Five Weeks

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—Marrying a film star has had a startling effect on Paul Whiteman. Margaret Livingston, the new Mrs. Whiteman, coming from Hollywood has slim-figure ideas, and the first thing she did was to put Paul on a Hollywood diet.

The result is that the fat "King of Jazz," who has come to New York this week on his honeymoon, has lost 69 pounds after being married five weeks.

He is almost unrecognizable. Instead of four chins he is now getting along with a meagre two. His silhouette has changed from the familiar great globe to the neat outline of an athletic man. He no longer turns sideways to step into an elevator.

People have ceased to recognize him on the street. He is still a big man, certainly, for he is over six feet tall and heavily built, but his bride is scrupulously watching his weight and he is still reducing.

PROUD OF HER WORK.

Mrs. Whiteman is so proud of her handiwork she is willing to give the recipe to anybody.

"I just feed him grapefruits the whole time," she said. "He takes a couple before breakfast, a couple before luncheon, and a couple instead of tea, and just a few glasses of grapefruit juice between meals, whenever he feels like it. I reckon he takes about eight a day.

"It's a well-known Hollywood reducing treatment, and the beauty of it is that he doesn't have to cut down his ordinary diet except, of course, that I don't let him eat bread or potatoes or pastry or anything starchy.

25 POUNDS MORE

"As soon as Paul and I became engaged I insisted that he reduce. It's really taken me about four months to get off that 69 pounds. Doesn't he look grand?" She looked at him thoughtfully.

"I'm going to get off another 25 to 30 pounds before I've finished," she announced.

Paul looked a little rueful.

"Of course I feel fine," he admitted, "but I'm thinking people won't recognise me if it goes on much longer, and if I'm not recognizable I shan't get contracts and then there won't be anything to eat anyhow."

HOOVER IS GIVEN BEER DATA

Washington, Sept. 19—The request of Walter Newton, President Hoover's political secretary, for information from the Census Bureau on the number of persons employed in the brewing industry in 1914, 1919 and 1929 was the topic of much speculation today.

The inference was drawn yesterday that the President sought the information and taxicabs containing excited inquirers began arriving at the White House in platoons to the music of jingling telephone bells inside the executive offices.

Newton, pressed for information, said that he had asked the information, and had obtained it, for a source outside the White House.

This was as far as the story went and it left the impression, which all White House callers have obtained clearly, that the President has no intention of getting behind a movement for any modification of the present dry laws.

The figures Newton sought, and obtained, were purely employment ones. They showed, on the basis of the five-year manufacturers' censuses, that in 1914 75,000 persons were employed in brewing, of whom 62,000 were wage earners; in 1919, 42,000 were employed, of whom 34,000 were wage earners, and, in 1929, there were 6400 (making near beer), of whom 5000 were wage earners.

The total compensation to employees was $80,000,000 in 1914, $38,000,000 in 1919, and $12,000, in 1929.

A formal request for agreement on the part of Washington—an inquiry whether Dr. Casaurance will be persona grata—is still to come, but it may be stated on the best authority that the U. S. State Department officially knows the Mexican Government proposes to change its abassador.

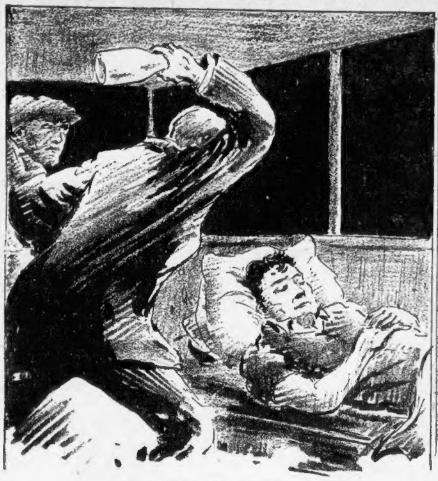
HAL COFFMAN SHOWS TRAGIC HIGHLIGHTS OF 'PENGUIN'S LAST VOYAGE'



HOW YACHTSMAN MET HIS DEATH

In the murder of Benjamin Collings the autopsy shows that his skull was beaten to a pulp with a milk bottle wielded by pirates as he dozed on deck. Police say he was killed by these blows before his body was cast over the side of his yacht into the sea by the two pirate slayers.

COULD HE HAVE CALLED

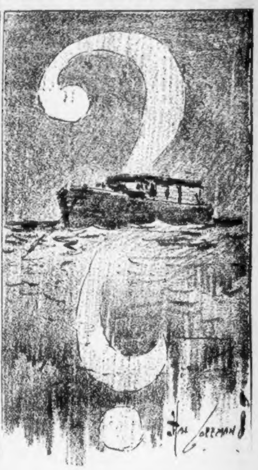
Yet his wife's story of the baffling sea tragedy says that he called to her after he was thrown into the water—"Lillian, do as the men tell you—remember Barbara."

ANOTHER DISCREPANCY

If he WAS DEAD before being thrown overboard, why should one "pirate" be concerned, and say to the other—as Mrs. Collings told—"Don't tie him too tight." This question is puzzling investigators of the case.

CAN YOU EXPLAIN THIS?

If Collings had been beaten to still his cries AFTER being thrown overboard, why would not Noteman, the passing yachtsman, have seen the "pirates" as they escaped?



THE SECOND "PENGUIN"

To deepen the mystery of this weird case another yacht named "Penguin," identical in build, was not far from the boat. What craft was this mystery vessel?

LONG PREDICTS $4,000,000 LESS REVENUE

Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation Henry F. Long said today that estimates indicate the State's tax revenue next year will shrink about $4,000,000.

He made this statement in connection with Governor Ely's orders to all department heads banning salary increases and calling for reduction of expenses of not less than 5 per cent.

The estimated income this year from all tax sources is $31,000,000.

DROP EXPECTED

He estimated that the inheritance and estate taxes, which this year is yielding approximately $10,000,000, will yield between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 in 1932.

The business corporation tax he figures will bring in approximately $1,700,000 next year, as compared with $2,000,000 this year. The public service corporation tax he counts on for $1,400,000 instead of $1,900,000.

Income which Commissioner Long believes will remain about the same includes $3,900,000 from the insurance tax; $3,250,000 from savings banks and savings departments of trust companies; $300,000 from the tax on trust companies and $275,000 from stock transfers. The gasoline tax, the revenue from which he did not state, he also believes will be about the same.

TOWNS SHARE TAX.

Other taxes, on real estate, personal property, auto excise, polls and income, all go to the cities and towns and the state does not benefit, he pointed out.

MARY IN BRIDAL 'MYSTERY'

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—A new romance was attributed by newspapers today to Mary Lewis, noted opera singer, but its exact status was uncertain.

The Daily News said she was married several days ago to Robert L. Hague, a vice-president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, the secret being disclosed unwittingly by servants.

The New York American, on the other hand, said that Miss Lewis and Hague left New York last night for Maine, to be married today. Cuthbert Hague, a brother, accompanied the pair, the American said.

Miss Lewis was married in 1927 to Michael Bohnen, who starred with her in Metropolitan Opera roles. There was a divorce in three years.

Hague was once married to Edith [illegible], modiste, who was robbed in her New York apartment in 1924 of $300,000 worth of jewels. The Hagues were divorced about three years ago, but kept it a secret until last March.

Eat Alfalfa If You Want to Get Vitamins

Gandhi Pays a Visit to London Poor

London, Sept. 19 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi, one of the few members of the Indian round table conference remaining in the city over the week-end, paid a surprise visit today to London's East End poor.

He mingled with them in their dingy hovels, asking many questions of the people he met about their mode of life. So great were the crowds he attracted that six men from Scotland Yard were brought down to maintain order.

"You're better off than some of the starving people in India," the Mahatma told one widow who lives with six children in a two-room flat. "At least you have food and clothing and a roof over your head. Many of our people have not those things."

He won the hearts of many by playing with the children, offering advice to mothers, and stroking the household pets.

N. E. COUNCIL TO AID JOBLESS

Lakewood Me., Sept. 19—Organization of a central committee was suggested today as the first step in unemployment relief this winter at the second session of the 24th quarterly meeting of the New England Council.

The recommendation, brought forward by John F. Tinsey of Worcester, would have the central committee co-ordinate efforts of all existing relief agencies.

Tinsey also claimed that communities should endeavor, wherever possible, to provide work rather than charity for able-bodied unemployed.

GLORIA SMILES AT CUPID QUIZ

Beverly Hills, Cal., Sept. 19—The answer which Gloria Swanson, motion picture star, made today to an inquiry whether she had been married secretly to Michael Farmer, stock broker of New York City, might indicate that the wedding had occurred. And, again, it might mean just the opposite.

Miss Swanson smiled and left it just there. Her reply was:

"Supposing I had secretly married Michael Farmer, if it was a secret naturally I would have to keep it a secret."

In an attempt to solve the riddle of the reply, a radio message was sent to Dudley Field Malone.

AUTUMN BRINGS FIRST TOUCH

Autumn registered its first "direct hit" in New England early today.

They said they were Arthur Echevarria, 16; Roger Rivers, 16; his brother, Michael, 14, and Henry Camacho, 14, all of New York City.

Their teeth were chattering, so they were unable to say much until coffee was procured. They then said they boarded the bus last night at 125th st., hiding under the baggage tarpaulin. They came here to seek work. Police sent word to their parents.

RUM BOAT WITH BIG LOAD TAKEN

Gloucester, Sept. 19—Three men were arrested and 460 cases of liquor seized early today by a Coast Guard patrol boat when the power cruiser 188-E was captured 16 miles of Thatcher's Island.

Patrol boat 157, Chief Boatswain's Mate Harold Stone, made the capture. The rum runner was too deep in the water to make any speed.

The men arrested gave their names as Harlan Batchelder of Merrimac st., Newburyport, the skipper; George Sullivan of Thatcher st., Brookline, and Vito Carmelo of New York.

The rum runner was registered to George Silver of Boston, and was later taken to the Appraisers Stores in Boston.

ESTELLE WILL KNOW MONDAY

(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service.)

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 19—Estelle Taylor is standing pat and making no move to prevent her husband, Jack Dempsey, from securing a default divorce decree in Reno, Nev., next Monday. Such a decree she contended today, would not be recognized in other states.

Miss Taylor has a counter suit in California.

"I don't dare go to Reno," Miss Taylor said. "If I make any move toward recognizing this action it would put me under the jurisdiction of Nevada. Wait until he steps into California and see if he is a divorced man.

"I'd love to get this business over with, but I want to be friends with Jack. Way down underneath I like him. But I won't let him divorce me in Reno. As long as there is to be a divorce, I want to do the divorcing."

9 MORE QUINCY NURSES TO GO

Nine alien nurses at Quincy City Hospital today found themselves out of jobs, dating Oct. 1.

Five nurses resigned two weeks ago.

JILTED GIRL IN LOWELL CHOIR

Her early life in Boston and Lowell, where she sang in a church choir, was revealed today by Myrtle St. Pierre, who recently brought a $200,000 breach of promise action against David Hutton, choir singer husband of Aimee Semple McPherson.

She came to Boston at the age of 10 with her family, following the death of her father, a wealthy lumberman, in Rutland, Vt. Her brother and grandmother, on her mother's side, still make their home at Rutland.

She lived here for a few years and then went to Lowell, where she lived at the Y. W. C. A. She joined the First Baptist Church and became a member of the choir. She lived in Lowell until 1924, when she left for California.

Mrs. Jean Alcott, a member of the church choir, remembered Miss St. Pierre well and said she had been in the choir for a short time about eight years ago. She said she was very pretty and about 18 at the time.

She was understood to have been engaged to a Lowell man but this was broken when she moved to the coast. Letters received here by friends revealed the girl was studying to be a dental hygienist.

Gem Shop Robber Suspect Is Held

Ford Garden Plan Angers Farmers

Baraga, Mich., Sept. 19 (AP)—Henry Ford's "No garden, no job" edict, recently issued to family men employed in his automobile plants is meeting with opposition from outside sources.

Farmers throughout the upper peninsula of Michigan began raising a storm of protest, claiming enforcement of the order would impoverish them.

The Baraga Grange, leading in the protest, passed a resolution against the plan and announced that copies would be sent to every subordinate Grange in Michigan, as well as to the State Grange. The resolution urged that means be taken to have Ford's order rescinded or modified.

Ford's order was announced as a plan to help workmen in times of depression. He said that family men in his employ would have to go in for gardening next year or they would find themselves without jobs.

AMERICAN BAR IN TRIBUTE TO JUDGE HOLMES

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 19 (AP) The American Bar Association awarded its medal for distinguished service in the law today to Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court.

Justice Holmes, for more than 30 years noted for his liberal and dissenting opinions in the Supreme Court, could not attend the convention due to illness.

GRATEFUL FOR HONOR.

Instead he addressed the following letter in long hand from Beverly Farms, Mass., to J. Weston Allen, former attorney general of Massachusetts and chairman of the association medal committee:

"The unexpected honor that the American Bar Association has done me calls for an answer on the wings of the wind. But as I have not quite recovered my energy from a recent pull down, I avail myself of your permission to rely upon the postoffice rather than upon the radio.

"The law tries to embody things that men most believe and want. But belief and wants begin as vague yearnings and only gradually work themselves into words.

SEEK TO AID ALL.

"These words at first cannot fully express what they aim at. Some of us have tried to make clear what the aims are or should be, using history, economics and philosophy as our aids.

"If we have to help throw light upon the general scope of the subject or some part of it, we have so far helped our fellows along a predestined road and have been of use."'

KILLING LAID TO BEER RING

Providence, R. I., Sept. 19 (AP)—Harry Volpe, informer and rum runner, was murdered Wednesday night here because a New Jersey beer ring, attempting to force sales of beer on Rhode Island saloon keepers, discovered that he had tried to get information with a view to "turning up" the ring to federal authorities, Providence police believed today.

Several men, including the sergeant-head of the Woonsocket police vice squad, already have been indicted by the federal grand jury in the Jersey beer ring scandal here.

One of these men is Frank Cataldo of Cranston, R. I., who has informed police that Volpe cross-examined him closely regarding the activities of the ring, but that he (Cataldo) refused to tell him anything, stating that he knew nothing.

MISS BETTY McGINLEY PLANS DEBUT IN NOVEMBER

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

DEBUTANTE AFFAIRS ARE FILLING UP THE SOCIAL calendar and it is timely to give a few facts about some of the girls who are well known or may become so through family, talent or wealth, or all three. It does not always mean that they have the best times, are more popular with the stag lines or grab off a Prince Charming before the end of their season, though that might happen. Some of the young maidens who live farther away and are just breaking into Boston circles sometimes end up the season with the highest honors socially.

MISS LINDA COLLENS

One of the sub-debs whose family is well known and liked is Harriet Moseley, daughter of the F. S. Moseleys of 144 Beacon st. No other deb will be more beautifully or more expensively gowned, hatted and shod than she and her ball will be the perfectly done. We can remember when her sister Charlotte came out a few years ago at a ball held in the stately old Hotel Somerset. She shared honors with Catherine (Baby) Winslow, now Mrs. Louis B. McCagg of New York. Charlotte has not yet selected a life partner, choosing to devote a great deal of time and talent on the Junior League and Vincent Club with another sister, Miss Helen.

Harriet, this year's bud, does not look at all like her beautiful mother and handsome father but has an air and a figure. Slim, tall and Spanish looking, lace and soft chiffons become her. With milky-white skin and coal black hair, black eyes and red lips, she is already popular with the boys and she likes them.

Prominent in Social Life of Boston

THE MOSELEY HOME ON THE WATERSIDE OF BEACON st. is large and handsome and they also have a lovely place at Newburyport and a summer place at Islesboro. Mrs. Moseley is an important member of the social life of Boston and was one of the patronesses of last year's Friday evenings, the dances for the sub-debs which are held at the Somerset each season.

MISS HARRIET SKIPPED off to Paris last spring and missed graduation at Miss Winsor's school, but she did not need to stay for a prize—she is one herself.

ANOTHER GIRL WHO IS getting off to a good start is Linda Collens. She is the typical sweet-girl graduate, always dressed a little bit old-fashioned. A perfect replica of father Charles T. Collens plus mother, who was a Winsor, and that is saying a great deal. She managed to acquire a fair share of the prizes at Winsor school last spring, which must have pleased the family. Speaking of that good old New England name, Mrs. Collens was Margaret Winsor and Mr. Collens is a successful landscape architect. An aunt, Mrs. J. Hampden Robb, who was Ruth Winsor-Minturn, of Beverly Farms, will entertain for her attractive niece, who with honest blue eyes and sweet smile combined with intelligence makes her about one hundred per cent perfect.

AND THE LAST YEAR'S girls are continually cropping up in the news. The De Normandie sisters, Alice and Ellen, with their so very rich cousin, Mary Vance, have been automobiling through England and France this summer and are on the seas toward their different colleges, Ellen to Vassar, Alice to a medical college in the West and Mary will visit her married brother, Robert, who lives in Virginia. Mary came out two years ago in Boston and was very popular in the Vincent Club. Her mother and father were both killed the previous year when a movie theater in Washington caught fire and the roof caved in. It was one of America's tragedies.

EVELYN AMES, A DAINTY bit of Dresden china, who came out two years ago, has returned to North Easton after spending a month in Paris with her sister, Mrs. Plimpton, who was Blanche Ames. Evelyn toured the south of France. The Plimptons live in New York and Mrs. Plimpton is very beautiful, a true Ames.

Evelyn Ames

MR. AND MRS. SAM BATCHELDER (Peggy Read) are in Scotland and will arrive home late this month.

STELLA POLARIS IS THE name of the magnificent ocean-going yacht which will take the luxurious fashionable group to the South Sea Islands "by invitation only." Mrs. Larz Anderson and Mrs. Hobert Porter of New York are sponsors.

DOROTHY PRESTON, POST-deb daughter of Mrs. Harold Cutler of Boston and Swampscott, and Sarah Cutler are on a shopping tour of New York, staying at the St. Regis. Have you ever dined at the St. Regis roof? We have been dining at various places, from cellars to palaces in the past few years, but there is no place where the atmosphere is more perfect, more beautifully decorated and more heavenly music than on the roof of the St. Regis.

Harriet Price Fall Bride

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, Sept. 19 (US)—The name "Howard Phipps" now can be removed from Society's list of eligible—and supposedly confirmed—bachelors.

For the wealthy son of the elderly Mrs. Henry Phipps and the late Mr. Phipps of this city and Great Neck, L. I., is to marry, a short time hence, Harriet Dyer Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore H. Price of 960 Park ave.

A formal announcement of Miss Price's betrothal to Mr. Phipps is to be made today and will be of wide interest—and is certain to cause many oldtimers to reminiscence over by-gone days when Harriet's father was known as the "Cotton King" and Howard's late father was a partner of the departed Andrew Carnegie.

Harriet, who is an especially talented young woman, is a member of the Colony Club and the Junior League and is named for her mother, the one-time Harriet Eugenia Dyer, daughter of the late Gen. Alexander B. Dyer, U. S. A., who was chief of ordnance during the Civil War.

Sportsmen in Dinner Tribute

New York, Sept. 19 (US)—The grand ballroom of the Hotel Biltmore became Belmont Park, complete with field, stalls and track, last night at a testimonial dinner in honor of Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia sportsman and horse lover.

Horses were hoisted by elevator 19 floors to the ballroom and there went through their paces to the delight of about 300 men prominent in polo, the hunt racing and the horse world generally.

The guests were seated at tables in the middle of the ballroom with stables to the left and right of them. At one end of the big room a box stall held Osmand, Widener's great sprinter, who looked out at the equestrians and nodded his head to frequent cheers.

There were numerous tableaux. During the dinner an army caisson, dragged by four horses and complete with army drivers, came dashing through the room. A short time later a hunt scene was enacted. Four mounted huntsmen, followed by 18 hounds galloped through the diners and away.

Herbert Bayard Swope was toastmaster.

AMONG SEASON'S BEVY OF BUDS

MISS JEAN ADAMS MISS PRISCILLA HOYT

MISS JEAN ADAMS is the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop C. Adams of Jamaica Plain, and Miss Priscilla Hoyt, is the daughter of the C. Wentworth Hoyts of Hingham. Miss Adams will be presented at a dance at the Brookside Country Club on Nov. 4, besides sharing the honors at a luncheon with Miss Hulda Smith later on.

Betty McGinley Plans Debut

Miss Betty McGinley has just returned from Europe where she has been sojourning with her brother, John R. McGinley. They are the children of Mrs. Holden McGinley of Readville, and Miss Betty, though she has already had something given in her honor as a debutante of the coming season, will be formally presented at a dance, to be shared, as was the tea in June, with Miss Barbara Greenough, daughter of the Harry V. Greenoughs of Worthington rd., Brookline.

This affair, which comes off on November 4, at the Somerset, will probably turn out to be one of the few balls (or brawls, as these Harvard debutantes like to call them).

Miss Betty is in line for a good many other presentations of different sorts, in Cleveland, where Father McGinley's family seem to want to do things up very nicely for her, in Philadelphia, where Mrs. McGinley (nee Gertrude Holden) once made her home, and perhaps in New York, the Mecca of all debutantes, where other relatives may be lurking to do the honors. Anyway, she is in for a very good time, and we know of several swains out Milton way who are always pretty happy when mamma lets them "take her out."

Speaking of summering in Europe, those who have been doing the rounds over there are straying home, to do a different kind of round here. We saw charming Miss Jeanne Lamont Proctor today, lunching with Miss Mary Frost, both two seasons out, and Miss Elizabeth Swift (the Concord one) a debutante this year. Miss Proctor, laughing as usual, was exchanging European gossip with Miss Swift, both having just returned, while Miss Frost kept up her end with tales of a dude ranch in Wyoming.

The Eugenie style was much in evidence on the two fresh from Paris. Miss Proctor accompanied Miss Betty Foster and her mother, Mrs. F. W. C. Foster of Heath Hill, Brookline, on the trip, as she did earlier in the year on one to the West Indies. She will continue her art work this winter, she told us, coming in and out from Concord every day, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Proctor, make their home.

Society Notes

MRS. FREDERICK HOLDSWORTH has just arrived from a summer spent in Chamonix, where her daughter, Miss Barbara, a post-deb, and her son, "Teddy," religiously climbed mountains every day. In fact they just calmly walked up Mont Blanc one morning, finding it no trouble at all. Later on in August they traveled about, ending up with two weeks at Le Tourquet. The Holdsworths will stay at their home on Eastern Point, Gloucester, until Milton Academy begins, where both "Teddy" and Miss Nancy, Mrs. Holdsworth's other daughter, attend, when they will move up to Brookline.

MR. REGINALD W. BIRD OF 21 Commonwealth ave., and Waveney Farm, Framingham, and his family, Mr. John R. Bird, Miss Betty Bird and Miss Patricia, sailed on the 15th for home, from Scotland. They are accompanied by Miss Betty's fiance, Mr. William O. Clark, who joined them a month ago for shooting on a grouse moor. The Birds left in June and traveled until the grouse season began on the 15th of August. Miss Bird and Mr. Clark will be married within a month of their arrival, on Oct. 17.

MRS HAROLD F. McNEIL OF Chestnut Hill, and her post-deb daughter, Miss Virginia, are in New York, staying at the Hotel Weylin.

375 Freshmen Start at Tufts Monday

Bostonians in Swiss Society

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL

Lucerne, Switzerland, Sept. 19 (US)—Tennis and golf ashore and swimming and boating on the lake keep the international colony hereabouts well occupied.

Seen among the many sun-bronzed bathers in the throng on the beach or sipping cooling drinks in the shade of the Verandah Restaurant were Mrs. Kiley Smith of Boston, in an informal beach costume of white duppion, with her two pretty daughters in contrasting old rose and pink and blue pajamas.

They formed part of a gay circle which included Mrs. N. Shering Wells of Salem Mass., and Mrs. Hamar Wilson of East Orange, the latter in a becoming sea blue swimming suit with a daringly low back.

Other attractive costumes were worn by Mrs. Harry Slade of Oakland, who was in a pajama suit of lime green tint, and Miss Amy Marshall, also of California, whose broad trimmed hat topped a color scheme of blue and white.

Morning concerts on the promenade by the Casino Orchestra are enjoyed and form a pleasant interlude in the busy social whirl.

Mrs. Hollister Ewan of Santa Barbara, a popular Lucerne hostess, was in vivid green. She had a broad brimmed panama. With her was her sister, Miss Evelyn Hurd, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Schaefer of Boston, and Mrs. Alice T. Tapley in a becoming tailored suit with latest hat to match.

POLITICAL NOTES

News and Gossip About People You Know

RUBY ENDORSED

Re-election now seems assured City Councillor Israel Ruby of Ward 14, Dorchester. At a meeting in his home in Supple rd., last night, it was announced to his supporters that the genial "Ollie," as he is familiarly known, has received the endorsement of Samuel Kasanoff, chairman of the Democratic ward committee, and Leo Golden, chairman of the Republican ward committee.

EASTMAN DISAPPOINTED

Associates at the municipal employment bureau are quoting the old familiar lines about "the best laid plans of mice and men" to "Mel" Eastman. "Mel" is a member of the band of Michael J. Perkins Post, American Legion, of South Boston. For the past year he has been planning to attend the national convention of the Legion in Detroit next week. Last spring "Mel" suffered an attack of pneumonia, and since that time has been in a weakened condition. Today the members of the band left for the convention city, but because of his ill health, "Mel" was compelled to remain at home. He says he is the most disappointed man in the city service

AGNEW WANTS ACTION

"What are you doing for Agnew?" seems to be the campaign slogan of Atty. James E. Agnew, candidate for City Council in Ward 21, Allston. To friends who greet him on the street he says, "Never mind the 'Hello Jimmy!' the burning question of the day is, 'What are you doing for Agnew?'"

BOOST FOR McGUIRE

Charles P. "Chick" McGuire, candidate for City Council from Ward 6, South Boston, says that he has received the endorsement of the members of St. Augustine's Young Men's Catholic Club of that district.

WEDDING BELLS

"Tim" Sullivan of the permit office, public works department, in City Hall, is to be married next Tuesday morning to Miss Katherine Fay of Dedham. The ceremony will be performed in St. Mary's Church, Dedham, by Rev. George P. O'Conor, pastor.

CLAMMING HIS HOBBY

John H. Kane, chief clerk at the Long Island Hospital of the city institutions department, dug three buckets of clams in four hours at Nantasket last evening. He says that clamming has been his hobby for the past 10 years.

McGARRY TO DETROIT

Peter McGarry of the penal institutions department in City Hall left by automobile last night for Detroit to attend the American Legion convention in that city next week.

O'LEARY ON VACATION

"Tom" O'Leary of the central office, city public works department, left today for a two weeks' vacation in the Canadian Rockies. He will spend his days there hunting, fishing, golfing, and riding.

WHERE MOTORIST WINS

Commissioner of Insurance Merton L. Brown has been able to point out one phase in the compulsory automobile insurance law where the motorist gets a "break," at the expense of the injured. This comes when someone is hit by a stolen car. Under the compulsory law, he pointed out, no damages can be collected by the injured. Also claims against Massachusetts motorists for injuries on highways outside the state cannot be charged against the operation of the compulsory law.

STATUE FOR EDWARDS

The statue to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge will be unveiled on the State House grounds in October. The pedestal is already in place. The idea is growing that another statue, an equestrian of General Edwards, is needed now to balance that of General Hooker.

REAL PROFITS OF LIFE AS FORD SEES IT

—By Gilbert Seldes—

GILBERT SELDES

THE OTHER DAY HENRY FORD helped to celebrate the eightieth anniversary of a newspaper, with a small forecast of life in the next eighty years. Here is a subject on which any man may grow maudlin; for a specialist in saying the wrong thing, these symposia are pushovers. "Perhaps," says Mr. Ford, "our most progressive step will be the discovery that we have not made so much would suggest."

From the man who has contributed so much to the clatter, this is highly interesting. But Mr. Ford, determined to be sensible, intelligent, and tough-minded, goes further.

"It is only man that progresses," he says. "His accomplishments to this present are those of being plainly possessed of infinite possibilities, but as plainly stultifying them . . . After all, the only profit of life is life itself, and I believe that the coming eighty years will see us more successful in passing around the real profit of life. The newest thing in the world is the human being. And the greatest changes are to be looked for in him."

Men—Not Fords

So Mr. Ford links himself with Haldane and Millikan in believing that the biogical sciences will become the center of interest, in place of the physical sciences; that we will have to know more of man and less, perhaps, of machinery, in the next four generations. Mr Ford thinks that character (and conscience) have not kept pace with intellectual development; he thinks that our economic machine will have to be redesigned to make it do what we have said it could do. This means, fundamentally, that we cannot go on saying our present system provides work and happiness for all, all the time, and all's for the best in the best of all possible worlds; we cannot go on, unless we intend to make good our words.

The wonder to me is that people do not wonder more about what our descendants will want out of life. We go on cheerfully assuming that fifty years from now people will still want skyscrapers, elaborate apartments, movie cathedrals, faster motor cars, more hot dog stands, and more money to spend on all these things. We assume also that people have always wanted these things or their equivalents, and that they are universally wanted, always, everywhere, forever.

Who Is Human?

It gives us pleasure to read about graft and corrupt magistrates and insurance scandals in the time of the Caesars, because we are reassured that human nature cannot change. But when we talk of human nature we leave out the Chinese, of whose nature we know little, and the Japanese who, until recently at least, loved honor more than life and proved it by suicide; we leave out the saints, philosophers, the scientists, the artists, and the aristocrats—that is to say the very people by whom we judge human nature at its best—because they do not fit into our scheme.

Suppose human beings decided on an entirely new series of objectives. Let us say they determined to have more health and less money; more play and less power; more conversation and less entertainment. Suppose that the yacht-ideal no longer inspired the prosperous man, who decided to retire and grow flowers, in a small way; suppose the man-about-town ideal no longer influenced the undergraduates of all ages. Suppose that instead of killing themselves in order to live at the center of many important things people decided to make themselves the center of a few things they really liked.

Treasonable Thoughts

All these things, you would say, could cause only a social change, a little more important than the change from theater parties to backgammon parties. The fact is that a real change in human wants would upset every manufacturer and two or three political parties. It is almost treason in the United States to think of a time when people will not want to move rapidly and comfortably from place to place or will throw out their radios because they prefer to walk in the moonlight along the banks of unpolluted streams.

The basis of American life in the past 80 years has been unlimited wants with an exceptionally high proportion of satisfaction. This is what we call human nature. But the basis of French peasant life has been wanting very few things with, perhaps, an even higher proportion of wants satisfied. What would happen if America changed to the French system?

Mr. Ford speaks as the apostle spoke of more life, not more things. Is it possible that having been a radical in manufacture, he has become an anarchist in social theory?

An Old Figurehead

Long years ago it sailed uncharted seas,
  This carven dragon, whismical and quaint,
  That knew adventure, such as poets paint
In glowing ballads, and the mysteries
Of mist and mirage; knew the spicy breeze
  That blows enchantment over tropic isles;
  And lure of hidden treasure that beguiles
Sailors to brave death-strewn infinities.
And now, all wind and waveworn, it adorns
  A courtyard, where small make-believing boys
Climb on its back and perch between its horns,
  As still the glamor of its past decoys
Their fancies to some far and tide-swept shore
Which in their games they tirelessly explore.

Charlotte Becker.

For a Little While

Beloved, do not say the warm words yet,
Nor reach your hand to touch me; only let
Unspoken beauty flash from heart to heart
Uncertainly, as frail young birdlings start
On shining untired wings; oh, fling no net
Of mad, sweet words to capture me, but let
There close about me for a little while
Only the slow enchantment of your smile . . .

Dorothy Hobson.

Hello! Oh, Yes

—By Diana Bourbon—

WHENEVER anyone talks to me about the joys of civilization and progress I remember that thing we call the telephone, and am grateful for nothing, absolutely nothing. That little instrument outweighs them all! . . . Consider for a moment what it has done for us:

It has robbed life of all privacy; ruined our manners; done away with the charming and graceful art of note writing (and the pleasure of note receiving); it has—oh, there's no end to what it has done . . . In return, at the cost of infinitely more time and patience than any note ever exacted, it has expedited the process of communicating with the absent, and made us a little more objectionably efficient than we already were! (Imagine exchanging any of the slender, elusive charm of life through an instrument like that . . .)

All of a Sudden

The awful part of it, too, is its relentlessness. No escaping the creature. When the post arrives, one needn't immediately open all it has brought, and know the worst! Letters—if one is not feeling strong enough—can wait. And when people call at inopportune times—when one is washing one's hair, or in the throes of inspiration, or has a rare attack of the appetite for work—one just doesn't answer the door, or one's maid regretfully informs them one is out . . . whereupon, knowing better, they depart without the slightest animosity.

Not the telephone!

In the greatest moments of life it is just as likely to ring as not. And it'll keep on ringing . . . 'til you answer it, or take the receiver off, when it will buzz in ruffled rage—even more irritating.

Answer This One

Could Shakespeare ever have written his immortal tragedies, could Beethoven or Chopin ever have composed so grandly, if there'd been a telephone in the house? I don't believe it.

Besides—the people who wrote notes could always be divided into two classes: those who wrote because they really had something to say; and those who wrote notes because they excelled at writing notes—and they were always worth hearing from whether they said anything or not. The telephone (so much easier and quicker!) has changed all that. People call you who neither have anything to say, nor know how to say it charmingly.

And indeed, who would waste wit or pathos on a bit of metal which denies you most of the effect of your words?

Yes, the bill has just come . . .

A Plaint

At early dawn he scans the day,
He tries to chat but is distrait,
I know he longs to be away—
  That man of mine, the Golfer.

Life was a bliss with naught
  to mar,
But now he seeks another star—
That he may do a course in par,
  That man of mine, the Golfer.

I meditate some measures bold,
It is no use to cry or scold;
Give me, ye gods, the clue to hold
That man of mine, the Golfer!

Paying for Peace

—By Rebecca West—

I AM STRUCK, as I move about the world, by the tragic significance that everybody outside England seems to attach to the dole. "Of course, you have the dole," they say; as who should say, "Of course, in your country leprosy is raging all the time."

Rebecca West

I see what they mean. It is true that we cannot afford to pay as much dole as we do in the present state of our finances. But there is no reason to be ashamed of the dole. There is a great deal to be said for it.

It has kept England from revolution. It is a mistake of the foreigner to believe that the English are naturally law-abiding. We keep quiet because since our country has always had to depend on negotiation of its limited resources we have developed a race of negotiators who can always smooth out a situation so that there is the minimum friction. The dole has been one of these expedients.

There has been no looting in England, there has been no disorder. The mob has not seized any power; and since the problem before us is not to break in on an abundance reserved for the few and to distribute it to the many, but to find a yet undiscovered formula that will make the machine a productive slave instead of an overproductive master, this is all to the good. Mob-rule would find itself helpless, and its helplessnes would discredit democracy The peace of England has been a real blessing.

Effect Is Good

There has been no great increase in crime. There has been a slight increase, but the standard of public safety has been high. A man who steals for food usually has the justification that, through some accidental disorganization, he has not been able to avail himself of the provision made by society for his need.

The effect of the dole on our national order has, therefore, been good. Its effect on international order, I believe, will be better.

In countries where this provision for the unemployed has not been made, one has a very strong impression that the governments are keeping the minds of the people permanently inflamed against neighboring nations in order to keep them occupied, and make them forget their own troubles. If there was a total international collapse, one suspects, the governments would not be above precipitating a crisis and making war. That permits them to transport the starving workmen away from the lootable streets of their own home towns to enemy territory and to have a good excuse to mobilize the national credit for filling their bellies; and there is always the off-chance of victory at the end of it all.

One could not play that trick on England now. Unless the English felt themselves the victims of some extraordinary act of aggression, such as an invasion, one could not get them to fight.

Society the Same

It is true that men drawing the dole become irresponsible, caring nothing for their country's security so long as their own is guaranteed. It is true that boys who have drawn the dole from the time of leaving school become hopelessly work shy.

But this is no new tragedy. Society has always staged the same drama. It held out as its chief recompense the opportunity to join a class which was in its own way on the dole, since it could put money by and live without working anymore.

Out of this class it got just what it got from the dole-drawers. It got a class that stood for law and order, that was interested in keeping things going. It got a class that was liable to deterioration. It became selfish, and members born into it had a strong disposition to become idlers, taking everything from society and giving nothing. Since the result of that is the present crisis, it seems to me that here is a case to worry about if one wants to worry about the evils of dependence.

THE VOICE OF Broadway

By Louis Sobol

A Little o' This, a Little o' That!

Now to be honest with you, I don't know into what diplomatic complications this paragraph is going to lead, but the situation is too interesting to keep out of print. From an authentic source I learn that all Russia is abuzz with Iron Man Stalin's secret romance with the present premiere ballerina of the Russian ballet, a beautiful 23-year-old lass named Marina Simyonovna. Soviet's imperturbable, level-headed dictator, according to the report, has gone completely mad about the girl although friends of his insist that the interest is purely platonic and fatherly. The fascinating angle is that the last premiere ballerina of the Russian ballet under the Romanoff dynasty was rumored to be the mistress of the late Czar Nicholas so that history seems to be repeating itself after a fashion. Be that as it may, in order to honor the lass, Stalin is said to have ordered a special box party at a recent opening of the ballet to which came all the high and low Commissars and their wives. The women in true Soviet fashion came dressed in their cleanest and neatest middy blouses and sat in what was once the royal box. Instead of using lorgnettes, however, during the intermissions, they remained quietly in their seats, eating bologna sandwiches.

Down Memory Lane!

Do you remember, writes in Bee Morosco, back in 1925, when you could pick up a newspaper without finding a Broadway column staring you in the face to spoil your day? If only (she writes) you were Prattling and Tattling then, what choice items you could have had. Pauline Frederick was advising Marjorie Rambeau to divorce Willard Mack—and then she went and married him herself. Marjorie married Hugh Dillman, and when she divorced him he was the most brokenhearted lad on Broadway. His vaudeville sketch was such a flop the audience hooted it in London style. Later he went to Florida during the boom to sell real estate, met Mrs. Dodge, widow of the automobile magnate—and is still married to her and her millions.

Sir Thomas Lipton went to the Coney Island Mardi Gras to crown the queen—her name was Sadie Blumberg. The next day he visited Sing Sing and was so impressed he sent the boys a silver loving cup for the winning ball team.

Peggy Joyce was trotting around with Charlie Chaplin and when she returned East for Christmas he sent her a present—a little doll—a replica of himself, which cost about a quarter.

Charlotte Greenwood and Reed Albee were inseparable and everywhere they went he used to take off his collar to relieve his Adam's apple and render the "Indian Love Lyrics."

Mae West and Jimmy Tammany were the most devoted couple on Broadway . . . Grace Valentine always referred to her husband, Jay Barnes, the press agent, as the corpse . . . Ann Nichols stopped writing a yearly vehicle for Fiske O'Hara and clipped her coupons from "Abie's Irish Rose" . . . Joe Brown played three years in "Listen Lester".

Historical Note!

How golfers came to wear knickers, no matter what you've heard, is best told by Charles Hill, who swears with his right hand upraised that it's the truth, s'help him. They were holding a golf tournament in Scotland. Those were the days when they wore long trousers. One of Scotland's leading players won the tournament by an almost unbelievable score—this was B. P. J.—before Bobby Jones. Unfortunately, he forgot to tip his caddy and the story leaked out. The champ, it seems, had a hole in his pocket. Every time he drove a ball out of bounds or lost it he simply let another slip through the hole in his pocket, thereby saving himself the loss of a stroke and usually providing himself with a strategic lie. Whereupon, a great to-do arose, from which came the decision that hereafter players would have to have short pants strapped tightly above or below the knee. All of which may be applesauce, of course, but just look how it fills out a paragraph!

Clap Calloused Mitts!

George White and I have never been what you might call bosom pals. Either he dislikes me or I dislike him—I've never been able to settle it clearly in my own mind. And so, when some weeks ago, I inspected his "Scandals" at Newark and found it just a big piece of Camembert—and not very choice Camembert—I wasn't at all distressed. Monday night, I went to see the revamped offering premiere at the Apollo. This is my handshake to Mister White. He's done what I thought he never could do, converted a sure flop into one of the season's genuine hits. How he did not, I don't know. I can only guess that his astuteness in bringing Ethel Merman into the piece helped. I can only guess that eliminating a few jejune bits of business, unfunny skits and vapid dialogue helped. I can make other guesses, too, but they don't matter. White has welded what started out to be a drab, junky musical into a smooth running, polished vehicle. He's even made an actor of sorts out of Rudy Vallee and taken his megaphone away from him. For that, he should be thanked. Above all, he's given us the most impressive bit of theater in recent years. I refer to the operatic spiritual, "That's Why Darkies Were Born," sung by Everett Marshall. This fellow White, in spite of my personal prejudices, deserves applause. He'll probably get the kind he wants—at the box office.

An "All Right Guy!"

Ted Koehler, the ditty fashioner, recalls the time some years ago when a chap blew into the old Rendezvous in Chicago and demanded liquor. The proprietor refused. "I don't know you," he said. "No can do." The stranger persisted. "You'll find me an all right guy," he insisted. "I'm on the level. Lis'sen, I'm a pete man. I just blew in from a job in St. Louis. We shot so much soup into the box, it blew 80 grand into confetti and a hole in the floor. I'm playing single 0 from now on. So you can see I'm an all right guy, so how about a shot?"

History of a Song!

A song soon to be published will bear the name of J. Fred Coots, who has turned out some neat ditties in his time (his latest is "Love Letters in the Sand"). How the lyric fell into his hands makes a fetching yarn. Coots dived into a crap game in Cleveland the other night and won $7000, but a chap named Charlie Newman, well known Chicago lyric writer, went for everything but his suspenders. Finally, he threw down a sheet of paper. "This is my latest song," he announced. "I've named it 'Please Return My Heart.' I'll fade it against a hundred bucks." Coots faded him. Newman tossed an ace and a deuce and lost the song.

Dancing Revue Is Topliner

The new stage show starting Monday at the Scollay will be headed by a lavish song and dance revue, starring Irene Vermillion. Miss Vermillion has won a name for herself as one of the cleverest dancers on the boards.

In addition to the internationally famous Irene, the show will feature a comedy act starring Frank Devoe. His sketch is called "Ice," and he is assisted by Charlie Bates, at the piano, and Dorothy Drumm. Four girls come here on this new bill direct from the Paramount Grill in New York. They are billed as "Rhapsody in Blondes." The Rose Kress Trio will furnish difficult skating feats on the program. There will be other acts.

Bowdoin Square

At the Bowdoin Square, beginning tomorrow, will be presented pictures and seven acts of vaudeville. The top feature is "Dirigible." Another picture is "The Lady From Nowhere." Cabaret Night comes on Wednesday. The entire bill changes on Thursday.

Mid-Season Activities in Drama

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Slightly belated, but with commendable spirit, the drama year will leap into mid-season form on Monday. Except for the Hollis, which seems destined to remain shuttered and padlocked indefinitely, the downtown playhouses are all relighted and happily tenanted. Four new plays are knocking at the gates, quite willing, of course, to share in the fruits of the season.

* * *

If not the most important, the arrival of Milton Aborn's Civic Opera Company at the Colonial may turn out to be the most interesting of the youthful season's adventures. For, with this organization, will come the first test of strength between "The Mikado" of the Messrs. Shubert and that of Mr. Aborn. For a week silver throated songsters at the Colonial and the Lyric will engage in merry musical tournament; for a week you will be privileged to guess which of these two "Mikados" better sustains the good old Gilbert and Sullivan tradition. With a week of good business to encourage them, the Shuberts have extended the run of their own brand of "The Mikado." Their rivals at the Colonial can hardly do that, as the Boylston street engagement is limited to four weeks, with the repertoire already arranged.

Nicholas Young

Perhaps the most likely sign of a return to good times in the theater is a tendency on the part of the barons to price their wares for wide distribution. Where a year ago the price scale of both dramatic and musical shows ran from $3.85 to $4.40, it will be noticed that the prevailing scale for new entertainment now ranges from $1.50 to $3.00, with only one show in town asking the latter figure. The general idea of bigger sales and smaller profits seems to have caught the attention of the men who make the drama. In New York there is the same inclination to modification in theater price lists, with $2.50 remaining as the average rate demanded for the season's new plays.

How greatly these price reductions were influenced by Earl Carroll is a matter of speculation. But Mr. Carroll, with a new playhouse seating 3000 people, and a price scale limited to a three-dollar top, is reported to have taken in $60,000 on the first week of his present "Vanities." Even higher figures have been mentioned for Mr. Carroll's initial week. All of which, in some measure, indicates rather lively playgoer interest in what the theaters have to offer.

* * *

Not the least interesting of the week's new bills is "Precedent," which takes the imaginary case of an innocent man being railroaded to prison on thin evidence—and kept there by a curious interpretation of law. The story is said to have been drawn from a case which has befuddled lawyers and judges in a western state and which is still unsettled.

PLAYHOUSES STEP INTO FULL MID-SEASON FORM

The flowers that bloom in the spring, as you will discover at the Colonial on Monday, are merrily presented by Ethel Clark, charming Pitti Sing of "The Mikado."

"Squaw Man" at Orpheum

Produced as a talking picture under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille, "The Squaw Man," a story familiar to stage and screen devotees the world over, is the current screen attraction at Loew's Orpheum. Warner Baxter, Lupe Velez, Eleanor Boardman, Charles Bickford and Roland Young enact the leading roles.

Headlining the stage bill is Harry Kahne, whose exhibition of unusual mental feats completely baffled the audience. His demonstration of how many different ways the human mind can work at the same time is both mystifying and amusing.

The song and dance offering of Bert Nagle and the English Tivoli girls was also well liked. Billed as the "Midnight Serenaders," these artists scored a decisive hit with the assistance of Icky Forbes and Martha Vesta.

Other entertainers who help to make this week's vaudeville bill a satisfactory one are "Mike" Ames, female impersonator; Lou and Ruth Cameron in a comedy piece with Billy Howard, and the Liazeed Arabs, whirlwind tumbling artists.

Dad Fearsome to Children

A man who is a heroic figure in the world of comedy may be nothing but a villain in his own town, or even in his own family. Thus muses Groucho Marx, the only mustachioed Marx of the Four Marx Brothers who are appearing in "Monkey Business" at the Olympia.

During progress of the filming of the picture, Groucho was planning the fourth birthday anniversary of his little daughter, Miriam. Needless to say, Miriam was making plans also.

"May I come to your party, dear?" Groucho asked the tot one evening at supper.

"Oh, no," Miriam replied, "you'd scare the children."

Boston Society Is to See Show at Colonial

Courtney Crocker, Boston consul to Japan, and members of the local Japanese society, will attend the opening performance of Milton Aborn's Civic Light Opera Company on Monday evening at the Colonial, when that organization begins its four weeks' engagement in "The Mikado." Mr. Crocker and the Japan Society of Boston are honoring and entertaining Miss Hizi Koyke, the Japanese soprano, who sings the role of "Yum Yum."

Fenway and Modern

Those two outstanding Orientals, Anna May Wong and Sessue Hayakawa, are featured on the screens of the Fenway and Modern, along with Warner Oland, the original Fu Manchu, in a new episode of the fascinating Sax Rohmer series, filmed as "The Daughter of the Dragon."

Expert Direction Highlights the Helen Twelvetrees Picture

Though Helen Twelvetrees is its star, "Bad Company," the feature at RKO-Keith's, turns out to be a director's picture. Undoubtedly, Miss Twelvetrees will pull the fans, her admirers being legion; but it is the expert direction of Tay Garnett that will give them entertainment.

"Bad Company" is a gangster film. It piles in all the crookdom thrills, with plenty of gunplay. Those who like their melodrama served up in the bang-bang manner, with thrills lurking behind every corner, while adventure goes off to seek the next criminal to be put "on the spot," will delight in this movie. It is done up brown by the story writers, who lose no opportunity to swing in all the twists of the racketeers and make the hero and the heroine lead a harassed life indeed in the course of the often tensely exciting reels. If more than generous contribution of gory massacres and such things make the perfect gang films, then "Bad Company" is it.

Plot and talk fail to toe the mark, but that is just where Director Tay Garnett gets his big break. He rises above the flaws of the material furnished him, and proceeds to get results out of his cameras. Thus he makes "Bad Company" interesting motion picture; he gives his lenses full play, and the effect is notable so far as his share of the production is concerned.

The outcome is vigorous camera action, smart technique effecting a sweeping panorama at times, or glorying in all sorts of angle "shots," which pep up the picture's tempo amazingly.

Miss Twelvetrees is disappointing, though probably her admirers will differ with us and unanimously vote her perfect in her part. But she fails to make her role ring true. Frank McHugh contributes excellent comedy; and the outstanding actor is Ricardo Cortez as the leader of the crooks.

John Gilbert Has Excellent Support in State Picture

By HARRIS MORGAN

John Gilbert, in a tale of love and intrigue, is the presumptive heir to all the starring honors in "The Phantom From Paris," feature now at Loew's State. But the one-time matinee idol has superb performers about him who shine far more splendidly, notably among them C. Aubrey Smith, Ian Keith, Lewis Stone, Natalie Moorhead and Jean Hersholt. They make the film hum along in realistic manner. Stone is especially good.

The story is a good one, being based upon the great tale by Gaston Leroux. Gilbert, as Cheri-Bibi, is a magician, a man who makes light of such things as strait-jackets, handcuffs, leg irons etc. His intense love for Cecile, played by Leila Hyams, a girl of wealth and prestige, gets him into the direst circumstances, even to being accused of murder by a cold-blooded marquis who wishes to have the girl for her money. Bibi's knowledge of tricks serves him in good stead when he is arrested, for he extricates himself from prison.

One thrilling deed follows another and finally Cheri-Bibi hears that the marquis who married Cecile under false pretences, is on his death bed. Bibi knows that the marquis committed the crime of which he himself is accused, and steals the marquis from his bed, a dead man and too late to wring a confession from him. Through plastic surgery Bibi has his features made to resemble those of the marquis and carries on the impersonation to the end that he is made a free man to marry the girl whom he loves.

The Week's Playbills

COLONIAL—(opening Monday). "The Mikado," most popular of the Gilbert and Sullivan works. Included in the cast are Howard Marsh, Frank Moulan, William Danforth, Herbert Waterous, Vera Ross, Allen Waterous, Hizi Koyke, Ethel Clark and Elinore Gilmore. Directed by Milton Aborn; produced by the Civic Light Opera Company.

TREMONT—(opening Monday) "Divorce Me, Dear," a comedy by Katherine Roberts. In the leading role will be found Lillian Foster; the supporting cast includes Reginald Mason, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Anne Sutherland, Richie Ling, Gustave Rolland, Robert Vivian, Andres Corday and Francesca Bruning. Staged by Antoinette Perry; produced by S. M. Biddel.

PLYMOUTH—(opening Monday) "Precedent," a serious play by I. J. Golden. May be taken as something like propaganda in the interest of a more humane interpretation of American law. In the cast are Ralph W. Chambers, Clyde Franklin, Charles Harrison, William Bonelli, George Farren, Kirk Brown, Ellen Hall, Musa Beale, Jeane Wood and Kathryn Card.

* * *

WILBUR—Mary Boland in "The Vinegar Tree." (Second week.) An exhilarating comedy showing the futility of middle aged ladies taking their youthful lovers too seriously.

SHUBERT—"Meet My Sister," a musical comedy from somewhere overseas. (Second week.) Walter Slezak and Nancy McCord, with lively Viennese music, make it fairly good autumnal fare.

LYRIC—"The Mikado," as arranged and done by the Messrs. Shubert. (Second week). A suitable cast gives Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Sullivan more than an even break.

The Belles Ring Beauty Bell

A lively burlesque show comes to the Old Howard, beginning Monday, bearing the title, "Liberty Belles," with Jack Conway as star. With this organization is that clever dancing beauty, Flossie Dever, known as the "Cyclone Girl." There will also be seen Eloise Dawn and Gladys Craig, Buster Leroy, Al Leroy, Frank DuFrane and Arthur Lines.

The management also offers vaudeville coupled with pictures. Larry Stoutenberg, trick shot champion; the O'Connor Family, Slim Moore and Pal, will be on stage. The pictures offer in the Knute Rockne Series, "The Last Yard." Others include Jack Holt in "Subway Express" and Buck Jones in "Fighting Sheriff." The midnight shows comes on Friday night with special features.

Large Band at the Boston

Clarence H. Flint, an outstanding musical conductor, has been appointed to lead a 16-piece orchestra at the RKO Keith-Boston, starting today. This enlarged orchestra will play for the vaudeville acts and will render some different novelty overture each week.

This is Flint's New England premier. He was selected for the RKO Keith-Boston post by Milton Schwarzwald, national musical director for RKO theaters, after a search that extended from coast to coast.

The services of Jean Green and his RKO-Lians have been retained and these popular favorites will play at the first show each day.

German Film Premiere Feature at Fine Arts

As a result of being the first theater in America to sign up as a branch of the fast growing European film-producing company, Tobis, the Fine Arts has secured the American premiere of the German film farce, "Die Firma Heiratet," for today. This musical travesty is the story of how a little business girl becomes a big business girl. It satirizes the pompousness of big business.

Waldron's Casino

"Going Some" is the title of the burlesque show which holds the boards at Waldron's Casino for the coming week. The star is the popular Jane Vitale. Viola Spaeth, Jessie McDonald, Ann Stryker and Jacque Huson are other "queens." The comedians are Vic Plant, Jimmie Walters, George Brennan, Sid Rogers and George Leon.

DESPERATION

Leila Hyams makes the most of her troubles in "The Phantom of Paris," at Loew's State.

Petite, but Brimming With Pep

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Alice White in person tops a mighty good program at the Metropolitan, the screen offering fine "box office" in "Personal Maid," starring Nancy Carroll, and Publix contributing a snappy and colorful revue in "Exotique." The diminutive Alice is apparently still holding the fealty of her myriad fans, for she is accorded an ovation that becomes a whole-hearted triumph.

* * *

The feature film is another of the Cinderella variety, always to be counted on to win audience sympathy, and hence increase the attendance. Add to that, the appearance of the popular Nancy, and the movie looks as if it might be on the way to financial success even if it be filled with faults.

Alice White

Its acting, particularly by that capable lady of the stage, Mary Boland, and by a footlight oldtimer, George Fawcett, and its direction by Monta Bell, are its outstanding virtues; and these keep it from falling by the wayside as a mediocre effort with a weak plot. Miss Carroll is the maid who steps from the East Side into a career of adventure. She has all sorts of more or less absurd things happen to her in her relationships with sons of wealth; coincidences that seem amazing help work out her make-believe destiny of happiness in the arms of a young millionaire.

Fans will be interested to note the debut of Terry Carroll, sister of the star; but "Sis" has very little to do. She may show up better in her next picture.

Paramount deserves credit for the sterling cast set round about the star, a thing too rarely done in star movies. In this instance, the acting—not forgetting Mr. Bell's expert hand—is the saving grace.

Miss White is worth seeing and hearing. She has exuberant personality, bubbles over with pep, and seems a most willing little worker.

"Exotique" has abundant fun and class. The whole Met bill is enjoyable, provided one makes reservations regarding "Personal Maid."

New Policy Begins at Loew's Gayety Today

Loew's Gayety inaugurates a new winter schedule, beginning today, with five special vaudeville acts and two all-talking photoplays to be shown under this new policy. Beginning tomorrow, Joe E. Brown will be seen in "Broad-minded" and Ruth Chatterton in "Unfaithful," together with these vaudeville acts: Maley and Somerville in Musical Novelty Songs; Hamilton and May, Haynes and Block, Claude De-Carr & Co., and the famous Gray Family of Songsters.

Montgomery Is Paced by Gable in Running for Movie Honors

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Louella O. Parsons

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—A year ago there wouldn't have been any doubt as to whether Robert Montgomery or Clark Gable was in the lead. Today there is a great doubt. Clark Gable has surged to the front and taken his place not only alongside of Mr. Montgomery, but some of his ardent fans say a few paces ahead. That needn't worry Bob Montgomery for there is no one as fickle as a movie audience. They change overnight and Bob is still one of the most popular leading men in pictures. It is the women who have gone Gable and who confess that not since the passing of Rudolph Valentino has any star given them such a thrill. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has bought a football story called "Huddle" by Francis Wallace. It will star Bob. The story is now running serially in the Hearst evening papers and it has plenty of good old gridiron atmosphere. Let's hope M-G-M puts some football player to work coaching Bob, for too many football stories have been spoiled by the awkward playing of the star.

Things of interest told me that Conway Tearle did not sign for the lead in "Nice Woman" as he expected. Conway has given the movies a trial and disappointed in not getting what he wants, he leaves for New York today where he will do a play. I don't know why he didn't get more recognition. Zelma O'Neal of varsity drag fame, is going to help Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler by playing a part in "Peach O' Reno"—and help is what I mean. Looks as if Willard Robertson is booked permanently as Skippy's father. He played that part in "Skippy" and now he'll play the same part in "Sooky." I'm told my boy friend Skippy, alias Jackie Cooper, was at Jim's beauty parlor having a hair treatment while I was there. Sorry I didn't see him. Seems as if the sun did awful things to his hair.

Seen and Heard

Some wit in Hollywood said that there was a stampede of "yes" men at the train to welcome Jack Warner home. Maybe the "yes" men were there—what's Hollywood without them? But I know that there were some who greeted Jack who didn't have an axe to grind—some who were glad to see him home. In fact, when Jack got out to the studio he had to hold an impromptu reception in front of the cutting room. He was unable to get from his car to his office because of the crowd of employes who wanted to give him a personal word of greeting. Not many of us will ask for more than to be as young at 70 as May Robson. This grand young-old lady of the stage and screen has agreed to make two personal appearances a day at the Los Angeles Theater to help promote her picture, "Mother's Millions." As soon as she finishes her personal appearance act she will turn her attention to her stage play, "Her Night Out," which opens in Hollywood. That isn't all, she is busy discussing plans for another picture.

* * *

What chance has a foreign actress? Looking at Marlene Dietrich, Greta Garbo, Elissa Landi, and Lily Damiti, we say every chance in the world. Yet, when we take a second and consider how long Vilma Banky has been without any kind of a role in the movies and how difficult it has been for Lya De Putti to find herself a movie job in this country, we say that not all foreign actresses can overcome their accents. Leni Stengel, a Berlin musical comedy star, came to Hollywood to act in the foreign versions. Then she made one English speaking picture, "The Road to Reno," and Paramount, not particularly interested in another foreign accent, signed her to play in "Husband's Holiday," Ernest Pascal's play, "The Marriage Bed." Time will tell whether or not Miss Stengel is a success here.

Snapshots of Hollywood

MAGIC BREW AND CHATTER

Mary Boland takes a little time off for table work. In the highly amusing "Vinegar Tree," at the Wilbur, she talks herself into considerable embarrassment, but it's all in good humor.

'Dream Pictures' Will Open Symphony Series

An important season of lectures in Symphony Hall will open on Sunday evening, October 11, with the first of three "Dream Pictures" by Branson De Cou.

He's Going to Marry Yum-Yum, Yum-Yum!

For the role of Yum Yum, in "The Mikado," opening Monday at the Colonial, Milton Aborn has secured the rich-voiced Japanese prima-donna, Hizi Koyke.

1700 START FOR DETROIT FOR LEGION MEET

More than 1700 men and women, wearing the blue of the Massachusetts department of the American Legion, today entrained in the North Station for Detroit, where the annual convention of the veterans' organization opens Monday.

The group which left today is the main body of the Massachusetts delegation, although hundreds of others are already in Detroit, and others are en route by automobile in smaller parties.

COLORFUL CROWD.

The colorful crowds which assembled at the station this morning included many wives and children of the legionnaires, some of them making the trip, others seeing their relatives off.

Although spirits were high, there was no disorder among the throng of Detroit-bound delegates. They gathered in the waiting room, overflowing into the trainsheds, and boarded the 12 sections of the special train in perfect order.

Twelve posts were represented in the departing crowd. They were: Lynn, Lowell, Gloucester, Beverly, Peabody, Bunker Hill, George A. Campbell, J. J. O'Connell, Norwood, Dorchester, Alexander Graham Bell and the Cambridge Rifle Team.

PAUL A CANDIDATE

The last named unit will compete in the marksmanship contest which will be a feature of the national convention this year.

Most of the Massachusetts legionnaires are enlisted in the movement to elect the state commander, Richard Paul, to the office of national vice-commander. Commander Paul is already in Detroit, where he has opened campaign headquarters.

CHINESE CHASE LINDY'S PLANE

Nanking, China, Sept. 19 (INS)—Nanking, ravaged by floods, threatened with a cholera epidemic and alarmed by hostilities in the North and South of China, found time today to extend a rousing welcome to Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh at the conclusion of their 800-mile flight over the Yellow Sea from Fukuoka, Japan.

Lindbergh came low over the naval base near the Hsiakwan pier, but as thousands were roaring out a welcome, the Colonel lifted his plane and disappeared.

He had decided the "Aquadrome" was of insufficient size to permit a safe landing, and so went to Lotus Lake, two miles away.

Municipal authorities immediately rushed two airplane loads of official greeters to the lake to accord the fliers an official welcome.

Elaborate arrangements had been made for the reception at Hsiakwan. Sampans were on hand to convey Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh to the residence of United States Consul Willis R. Peck, their official host. Detachments of United States sailors and Chinese soldiers were stationed at the port and the river had been cleared of all traffic.

Her Gift Is Suit

Miss Roberta "Bobby" Law, who gave James I. Bush, one of Madison Sq. Garden's "600 millionaires," a unique wedding present in the shape of a suit for $19,800.

'WILD' DRIVING LAW ATTACKED

Concord, N. H., Sept. 19—An attack on the constitutionality of the state law against reckless driving was launched in municipal court today by Atty. John Stark. He appeared as counsel for Harry Mills, 63, letter carrier, of Dunbarton, whose car crashed into a machine driven by Miss Bertha Royce, Goffstown school teacher, on Labor Day. Nobody was injured. Mills was on the wrong side of the road.

Stark argued for dismissal of the charge of "driving in such a manner that the lives and safety of the public might be endangered." This was refused by Judge Stevens and Stark said he would carry the fight to the highest court.

YOM KIPPUR ON RADIO FOR SHUT-INS

Jews all over the world begin the observance of Yom Kippur tomorrow evening.

The 24 hours of fasting and prayer, marks the end of the ten-day penitential period which began on Rosh Hashonah, the Jewish New Year.

A group of preachers, headed by Abraham Alpert, editor of the Boston News, will speak in 25 Boston synagogues.

Aged, sick and crippled persons will listen to a special radio broadcast, the first of its kind, by WBZ, beginning at 7 p. m.

The program will open with the singing of Kol Bidre Nidre, and during the exercises the "Ajofar," or ram's horn, will be sounded.

Mitchell S. Selib, tenor soloist of Temple Israel, will be in charge of the program, and will present Mischa Tulin and Miss Helen Selib. Alexander Brin, publisher of the Jewish Advocate, will deliver an address.

3 UNHURT WHEN CARS CRASH

Three persons escaped unscathed today in an automobile crash in Cleveland circle, Brighton, which upset and demolished one car and badly damaged the other.

An automobile operated by Miss Madeline McNally, 19, of Kingsbury st., Roxbury, ran broadside into another driven by H. G. Weston, 55, of Brookline st., Brookline.

The Weston car overturned and the driver was extricated unhurt. With Miss McNally in the other car was Edward J. Ervine, 17, of Washington st., Somerville. Neither was injured.

BIRTH CONTROL SPLITS CLERGY

Denver, Col., Sept. 19 (AP)—A secret meeting of the House of Bishops held the attention of the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church today.

The session, called to consider the action of the Lambeth conference in England "on certain subjects," was expected to bring out a discussion of questions regarding birth control, divorce and marriage.

The rules of the House of Bishops were waived to permit the attendance of the Rt. Rev. Michael Bolton Furse, lord bishop of St. Albans, Eng., an ardent foe of birth control.

Bishop Irving Peake Johnson of Colorado, in urging the secret session, termed the action of the Lambeth conference "on certain subjects" embarassing to him and to certain other American bishops.

Delegates speculated over the possibility of an open controversy between the English church and the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States on the question of birth control.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

THE SEAGLADES

Did we have fun! . . . The best opening night party we've ever seen, in Boston's smartest and newest supper room . . . But let's start at the beginning . . . Come on, let's fall in step behind that handsome blonde and her escort who are just coming out of the Copley Plaza, and follow them to the opening of Seaglades at the Hotel Westminster.

Here we go . . . Down the three or four steps from the street and you are in a new world . . . A world of soft, subdued, greenish-tinted lights and shadows . . . A world of laughter and chatter and of soft, suave rhythmic music . . . There's Lee Murphy, the prettiest cigarette girl we know, looking more attractive than ever in a smart blue petty officer's coat—brass buttons and all—and a white skirt . . . Lee probably knows the smoking preferences of more prominent Bostonians than anyone else in town.

Mickie Alpert spies us as we come in and he leaves the orchestra stand to come out and welcome us . . . Is he excited! . . . And happy.

"Al, it's the greatest crowd I've ever seen at a night club opening . . . Mayor Curley is here with his daughter, Mary, and some friends . . . EVERYBODY'S here! . . . Come on in and sit down."

Mickie sits with us for a moment, but there are so many people calling to him that he soon has to pop away and try to do a hundred other things at once . . . Let's look around and see who we can see.

FIFI AND SISTER

"Hello, Bill" . . . Here's Bill (Bostonpost) Cunningham coming over to our table to say howdy . . . And there's Mrs. Cunningham with several other people in their party . . . "Hello, Doris!" . . . There's Fifi D'Orsay coming in with Harleigh (Bostonamerican) Schultz; her manager, Roland Becker, and her sister, Alyce . . . There's Ed (Ritz Carlton) Stoddard with his fiancee and Mr. and Mrs. Rod Seymour from the Ambassador in Cambridge . . . "Thank you, Ed. I think we have enough, but if we run short I'll take you up on that" . . . Let's dance around and see who else is here.

Louis Walters (he booked the floor show), with Mrs. Walters and Eleanor Levine, waves to us as we get up to dance...There's Emily (WNAC) Mackenzie, and Esther Wasserman, the artist... Yep, there's Mayor Curley and his party..."Good evening, Mr. Mayor" ...But where's Mary Curley?... She must be out on the floor, dancing...Oh yes, there she is... And look...She dances the Peabody!...There's Walter Slezak, Nancy McCord and Katherine Skidmore, all from "Meet My Sister," sitting at that table near the orchestra...And Elliot (Bostonpost) Norton has just come in and waves to us.

"Hey, Max!"...Without even turning around we know who that is...It's Charlie (Harms) Goldberg...He just got home tonight from a junket through Canada and came right over to the opening ...Mrs. Goldberg is with him and so is the petite Nellie Glason, all the way from Hollywood...Betty Alden, the American's society editor, is sitting over there in the corner with a party of social registerites...And there's Carol Bacon waving at us ..She looks like Libby Holman with that black dress and that coat of tan she has acquired this summer down at Marblehead.

PRAISES THE MAYOR

Now they're going to start broadcasting . . . Mickie, grinning like the great big kid that he is, is doing the master of ceremonies . . . Mayor Curley comes to the mike and compliments Mickie and the Coulons father and son, on their new venture . . . Then there's a dance tune and then Bill Cunningham steps up and says his little bit . . . More dance music and we spy Mickie motioning frantically to us to come over and say something . . . Omigawd! What shall I say?

"Hello everybody! Duffy's my name and Hartford's my home. Mickie, you should be proud and happy tonight. You have a wonderful room and a wonderful crowd has turned out to pay tribute to you . . . And now, I want you all to meet Doreen Glover, WNAC's 'Dream Girl.' And is she a dream tonight with her black evening gown in sharp contrast with her golden hair!"

Doreen says hello and the broadcast continues . . . Then the floor show begins . . . Mickie is proudly carrying the shillelah that Mayor Curley gave to him . . . A dance team comes and goes . . . Jerry Dryden, an Earl Carroll girl, dances delightfully . . . Then Billy Paine gets a thundering reception . . . He sings and sings and sings and finally winds up by singing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," for the mayor . . . Then Mickie sings . . . "Doing the New York" . . . And he has never been better . . . Frances White, the star of the show, comes on and does her stuff . . . She looks great and works with ease and assurance . . . They refuse to let her go until she has sung "M-i-th, th-i-th, th-i-p-p-i."

KISS FOR MICKIE

Then come more introductions of celebrities . . . The Mayor speaks again and pays tribute to Mickie . . . Fifi D'Orsay comes out, takes a bow and "geeves M'sieu Halpert a great beeg kess." . . . Some guys have all the luck . . . Hum and Strum sing . . . Doreen Glover comes out and sings "Out of Nowhere." . . . When she had finished she was sure she hadn't been good and no amount of protestations to the contrary could change her mind . . . But I still think it was great.

Now we must hurry . . . Let's look around again quickly and see if there is anyone else we know . . . Oh yes . . . There's Eddie Moran from "Tell A Vision," and Ben (Robbinsmusic) Goldberg with his fiancee, Lillian ("Love is still blind") Green . . . And there's Bill Leonardi, and Gene (Bostonamerican) Scanlon and Connie (Heraldtraveler) Murphy and Leo Kabatznick and—oh, well, we could go on listing names of celebrities here for columns.

Some fun, hey keed?

Dr. Conrad to Talk on Five-Day Week

Many people who are attending the services at the Park Street Church are more and more looking forward to Dr. Conrad's answers to questions which have been sent him during the week, or queries which he himself has propounded. There may be those who do not agree with his answers, but are stimulated to think further. Tomorrow morning Dr. Conrad has promised to give his best answers to five questions vital and insistent. They are: "What would you do with $100,000,000?" This is not so vital to most citizens as to a very small number, but Dr. Conrad believes it worthwhile answering. 2. "How can we put religion into politics and government, yet keeping church and state separate?" 3. "What are we to think of six days' for five days' work?" 4. "Could work be found for the unemployed?"

MILKMAN GIVES NEW CLUES TO PIRATES IN COLLINGS MURDER

PIRATE'S SPITEFUL TRICK

DIST. ATTY. BLUE FRED MUNDER

Finding of this anchor confirms Mrs. Collings' location of the Penguin when it was boarded by two pirates and her husband slain. The pirates cut the rope and the anchor dropped to bottom. Dist. Atty. Blue and his assistant, Fred Munder, are talking over thi piece of evidence. (International News Photo.)

MYSTERY CURTAIN HIDES HONEYMOONERS

Mary McDevitt claims she is Mrs. Stephen Sohier Bigelow. He says she isn't. However, since she announced her marriage to the Boston society sportsman, she has vanished.

the family, said today. How far she can be helpful is a question. Her most significant statement was made to N. L. Noteman, yachtsman who found the yacht adrift with only the child aboard. Questioned by Noteman, the girl said:

"Daddy's gone in swimming with all his clothes on. There were some bad mans on the boat."

MYSTERY GROWS

Far from assisting in clearing up the mystery, however, the story of the wounded man, and the story of the two men who came ashore at Caumsett Beach, served only to make more involved the already topsy-turvy investigation.

Mrs. Collings continues to cling to her story—a story that, for all its admitted discrepancies, is the only explantaion of any kind thus far advanced to account for the murder.

The story of the wounded man beside the road came from William Schild, a milk wagon driver from Bay Shore, L. I. Huntington Bay is the outer bay at Lloyd's Neck. The inner bay is Northport Bay, where the Collings motor cruiser was anchored.

"On the night of the attack upon the Penguin," Schild related, "I was driving my wagon along a road that parallels the shore of Huntington bay.

"I saw a man sitting beside the road. He had a bloodstained bandage about his head. I leaned out of my wagon and called to him, and asked him what was the matter. He did not reply, but waved to me to go on.

"I went on a little way and came upon an automobile. There were two men in the automobile. They seemed to be looking for someone or something.

"It was too dark for me to see either of them clearly.

"I called out to them—

"'Are you looking for someone?'

"One of them replied, 'Yes—a friend of ours—he's hurt.'

"I said, 'I just passed a man with a bandage on his head.'

"The man in the car said, 'That's him. Where was he?'

"I told them, and they went off down the road in their car. Of course, I didn't see them actually pick up the man with the bandaged head, and, if they did, I don't know where they went afterward."

Schild's story, however, centered attention very definitely upon the accounts of the murder given by Mrs. Collings, who has stated that, when the two "pirates" went aboard the Penguin, they told her husband:

"We've a wounded man with us, and we've got to get him to a hospital in Connecticut. We'll pay you $100 to take us to South Norwalk."

SPLASHING RECALLED

It was when her husband refused to accommodate them, Mrs. Collings said, that they took possession of the Penguin by force, and, later, murdered him.

The most glaring discrepancy in this part of Mrs. Collings' story has been the fact that, in her account of what happened subsequently, the "wounded man" disappears entirely from the picture.

According to her story, after her husband was thrown overboard, the two "pirates" forced her to accompany them in their canoe, leaving her little girl, Barbara alone on board the Penguin. But what had become of the "wounded man." Mrs. Collings has never stated.

Schild's story, partially corroborative, at least, of Mrs. Collings' account of what happened, resulted in a new theory today.

This theory is that, perhaps, after all, there really was a wounded man—that he was tucked away out of sight somewhere aboard the Penguin and that Mrs. Collings did not actually see him—and that he was left aboard when the "pirates" kidnaped Mrs. Collings.

Then the Valentine appeared, and the wounded man, knowing that murder had been done aboard the Penguin, and fearing to be found aboard the craft, lowered himself into the water and tried to swim ashore.

It would have been he, not Collings, then that Noteman and the others saw struggling in the water.

TIME CHECKED UP

The story of the two men who came ashore, 36 hours after the murder aboard the Penguin, at Caumsett Beach, on the Marshall Field estate, where the body of Collings later was washed ashore, is of a somewhat more weird and erratic nature, although no more incredible than any one of a half dozen outlandish "clues" that have developed out of the mystery.

This story was given exclusively to the Boston Evening American by William E. Gormley of East Neck, L. I., a member of the New York Real Estate Board, with offices in the Huntington Hotel at Huntington, L. I.

Gormley asked that it be brought to the attention of Dist. Atty. Blue. Blue, however, had left Huntington, and so the matter was laid before Asst. Dist. Atty. Fred Munder. Munder said that he would question Gormley later in the day.

Gormley's story was as follows—

"Friday afternoon, September 11, I took a party of clients out to some property, a wooded stretch immediately east of Caumsett, the Marshall Field III estate, where the body of Collings later was found.

"We were all back among the trees, invisible from the sound, when my attention was called to the strange actions of a big sailing canoe. This canoe had two men in it, and two women.

"They appeared to be hunting for something in the water. They kept the canoe weaving back and forth, back and forth, covering every square yard of the water in the immediate vicinity of the beach, and the men kept poking their paddles down into the water as if in search of something.

SEARCHING WATERS

"All four of them, the women as well as the men, spent most of their time leaning over the sides of the canoe, peering down into the water. I remember one of the men in my party remarked:

"'They must have lost something overboard.'

"Well, I was busy with my own business, and didn't pay an awful lot of attention, but a little while later I heard voices on the beach. I went out from the woods, and found that the canoe had been brought in to shore. The two men were standing on the beach.

"I went down to them and told them that they were on private property. They were perfectly friendly, and the older man said, 'Oh, if that's the case, we'll go away. We were just out for a little sail, you see, and thought we'd come ashore.'

"This older man was a man about 50 years old, with close-cut iron gray hair. His companion was a boy of 18 or 19, very deeply tanned.

"I left them and walked back to my companions and we watched them get back into their canoe and sail away."

Gormley's descriptions of the two strangers tallies with those given by Mrs. Collings in describing the "pirates."

PILLOWS FOUND

The white strip of Caumsett Beach appears to be a magnet for inexplicable happenings. Just prior to Gormley's revelations, Herbert Johnson, Jr., of New York ave., Huntington, saw a strange object half in and half out of the water. Not far from the spot where Collings body was found.

Johnson's find turned out to be a pillow—a cretonne covered bed-pillow, water soaked but still bearing suspicious brown stains.

The pillow was turned over to Asst. Dist. Atty. Munder, who indicated that the stains would be chemically tested to determine whether they were bloodstains.

The significance here lies in the fact that Dr. Otto Schultze, Suffolk County medical examiner who conducted the post mortem examination of Collings' body, expressed the opinion that Collings received the first blow—a smashing blow across the forehead—while he was lying down, and, possibly, while he was asleep.

If Collings was lying down, asleep or preparing to go to sleep, the probability would be, it was pointed out, that he would have had a pillow under his head. Thus, if Dr. Schultze's supposition were correct it would be highly probable that the pillow would be blood stained.

Blue gave it out that he was leaving Huntington today "for the week-end," but it was learned that the prosecutor planned to spend the week-end aboard a yacht cruising the sound and revisiting the various points that figure in the Collings case.

WHERE COLLINGS GOT LETTER TELLING HIM WEALTHY FATHER HAD ARRIVED (AUG 25)

Many mysterious questions, as yet unanswered, are propounded by the log of the Penguin, whose engineer-skipper, Benjamin P. Collings, was murdered the night of Wednesday, September 9, in Long Island Sound. The log shows the Penguin lay quietly at anchor, with Collings, his wife and five-year-old daughter Barbara, aboard, in Lloyd's Harbor the nights and days of August 22, 23 and 24.

On August 25 Collins took the Penguin to Northport "to shop." There he got a letter from his sister Helen, stating that his wealthy father, Dr. H. P. Collings of Hot Springs, Ark., had arrived and was a guest at Stamford.

Collings immediately got the Penguin under way and sailed around to Oyster Bay, where he mailed an invitation to his father to come over and visit him. He anchored that night off Soper's Point. The next day, in Oyster Bay, he got a telegram saying his father would visit him "tomorrow." WHY DID NOT COLLINGS HASTEN ACROSS THE SOUND WHEN HE GOT THE FIRST MESSAGE STATING HIS FATHER HAD ARRIVED? WHY DID HE PREFER TO HAVE HIM A GUEST ABOARD THE PENGUIN RATHER THAN IN HIS $100,000 STAMFORD HOME?

On August 28 Dr. Collings, accompanied by his daughter Helen, arrived at Oyster Bay, were picked up on the Penguin, "taken for a ride," and that evening Collings rowed them over to catch the ferry for Stamford.

The mystery now deepens. For TEN DAYS Collings anchored each night off SOPER'S POINT. Then, on the day before, or the day he was murdered, he made a long journey from Oyster Bay around Lloyd's Neck (where his body later was found) and into Huntington Bay, where he dropped anchorage in the fatal PRICE'S BEND. There is not a word in the diary to indicate why he changed anchorage grounds. WAS IT JUST A WHIM OR WAS THERE A REASON FOR HIS SUDDEN JOURNEY? During the last ten days there is no record of any visit or attempt to communicate with his kin or his father, whom he was evidently so eager to see. WHY?

There was one other unanswered question in the diary. On August 30, ten days before he was slain, Collings spent a great deal of the day sorting charts. Was he contemplating a journey into strange waters. Again looms a baffling WHY?

Editor's Note: The erasures shown at the top of the map indicate the line of Greenwich and Stamford, much further away than the map permits showing.

DAD IS WAITING FOR BIGELOW

Stephen Sohier Bigelow, who still denies an elopement with Miss Mary McDevitt of Brighton, despite her claims to the contrary, left the Harvard Club early today while the girl's father, Deputy Sheriff William A. McDevitt, was sitting at home waiting for him to call.

Attaches of the club, and friends of Bigelow declared they had no idea where he had gone.

It was learned that a close friend of his, who had driven Bigelow and Miss McDevitt to various places in Boston on the night before the couple registered at the Hotel Somerset, had gone to Canada.

GIRL STILL MISSING

The attractive petite blonde was still missing today. After waiting patiently for Bigelow to telephone him, in response to a request to that effect which he left at the Harvard Club yesterday, her father started his second day of searching for her.

She left the Somerset Thursday afternooon, after having announced that she had eloped with Bigelow and married him last month, a statement which Bigelow, who was found at the Harvard Club a short distance from the hotel, promptly and vehemently denied.

NOTE UNANSWERED

"Dear Sir: Kindly phone me. Regent 0092. You understand I want to see my daughter."

McDevitt lives in Sutherland rd., Brighton, where he spent an anxious night. He sought to learn from his daughter's friends yesterday where she had gone, but failed. Today he planned more drastic measures if necessary.

Sheriff McDevitt said last night he had nothing against Bigelow and would welcome him as a son-in-law. Mrs. Bigelow, however, denied knowing the girl and declared her unwillingness to receive her under any circumstances.

The Road Back

—By ERICH REMARQUE—

Soldiers Reach City and Are Forced Into Fight With New Recruits

What Has Gone Before

Ernst, a schoolboy when he enlisted in the war, is telling the story of a group of friends who survived the years of trench warfare. On the way home from the front, news of the German revolution reaches them. Shortly afterward the troops are disbanded and leave singly and in groups for home. Farewells are said. Each must now face the future alone. But the friends whose experiences Ernst is telling go farther together, entraining at the station for their own home town. They find the train overcrowded. Men sit on top of the cars, hang on precariously wherever a handhold is to be found.

Now Go On With the Story

OUR packs joggle. Pipes are glowing; the dog is asleep on my knees. Adolf Bethke leans across to me and strokes the dog's head. "Well, Ernst," he says after a while, "we're going to separate at last."

I nod. It is strange, but I can hardly picture life now without Adolf, without his watchful eye and his quiet voice. It was he that educated Albert and me when we first came out to the front as raw recruits; but for him I doubt if I should still be here.

"We must meet sometimes, Adolf," I say. "We must meet often."

Outside the evening draws on. Woods lie along the skyline like black cows, fields show faintly in the dim light that shines from the carriage windows. It now wants but two hours for home. Bethke is getting his baggage ready. He lives in a village a few stations this side of the town and so has to get out the sooner.

The train stops. Adolph shakes hands with us all. He tumbles out on to the little siding and looks about him with a sweeping glance that drinks in the whole landscape in a second, as a parched field the rain. Then he turns to us again. But he hears nothing any more. Ludwig Breyer is standing at the window, indifferent to his pain. "Trot along, Adolf," he says, "your wife will be waiting——"

Bethke looks up at us and shakes his head. "No such hurry as all that, Ludwig." It is evident with what power home is drawing him away, but Adolph is Adolf—he continues to stand there beside us until the train leaves. Then he turns swiftly about and goes off with long strides.

"We'll be coming to see you soon!" I call after him hastily.

We watch him go out across the fields. For a long time he continues to wave. Then smoke from the engine drifts between. In the distance gleam a few red lights.

The train makes a big sweeping curve. Adolf has now become very small, a mere point, a tiny little man, quite alone on the wide, dark plain, above which, vast and electrically bright, ringing the horizon in sulphur yellow, towers the night sky. I do not know why—it has nothing to do with Adolf—but the sight fascinates me: A solitary man going out over the wide stretch of fields against the mighty sky, in the evening and alone.

Then the trees close up in massive darkness and soon nothing is left but swift motion, and woods and the sky.

WEDGED IN WARMTH

It grows noisy in the compartment. Here inside are corners, edges, odors, warmth, space and boundaries; here are brown, weathered faces and eyes with bright flecks in them; there is a smell of earth, sweat, blood, uniforms—but outside the world is rushing obscurely past to the steady stamping of the train; we are leaving it behind us, ever farther and farther, all that world of trenches and shell holes, of darkness and terror; now a mere whirlwind seen through the window—it concerns us no more.

Somebody starts singing. Others join in. Soon everyone is singing, the whole compartment, the next compartment, the entire carriage, the whole train. We sing ever more lustily, with more and more power; our brows are flushed, the veins swell out; we sing every soldier's song that we know. We stand up, glaring at each other. Our eyes shine; the wheels thunder the rhythm; we sing and sing.

I am wedged between Ludwig and Kosole and feel their warmth

FANNING

—By GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

Deacon Dan MacFayden. ↑ Won Last 9 Out of 10.
Terror to Westerners. And With Tail-Enders.
He Stands 'Em on Ear. ↓ He's Frail but, Oh, My!

SHANTY HOGAN'S OLD SOMERVILLE PAL

Right here in staid old Boston, we call him "Deacon Dan"
But they rave out in Mid-West, "MacFayden! What a man!"
He's death to all clubs Western, and Cleveland knows, no doubt,
That Deacon Dan'll git 'em, if they don't watch out!

Around here they call him "Deacon Danny." He wears glasses and a serious look. Any minute you might expect him to break out in prayer. In fact, Danny MacFayden, Red Sox pitcher, once really did deliver a sermon from the pulpit of a church in Concord. He may be "Deacon Danny" around this neck of the woods, but out in the corn belt of the Middle West he is considered the "Old B'y" himself. You can't blame 'em, for "Deacon Danny" has raised the very divil with the Western clubs. The Red Sox curve ball artist has won nine out of his last ten games from the Western clubs. And with a tail-end outfit! The only game he lost was a 3-to-2 game against Cleveland, in which Danny did not allow an earned run. No wonder the Westerners consider Deacon Danny plain p'ison.

Deacon Danny, if you recall, got away to a bad start this season. Couldn't seem to get going in April. But as the weather warmed up Danny warmed up, too. On the second Western invasion of Fenway Park Deacon Danny bowled over Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and St. Louis in a row. When the Red Sox headed West Danny repeated against Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis, and didn't allow Cleveland an earned run, although the Indians won, 3 to 2. In the present Western series at Fenway Park, MacFayden has humbled Detroit and Chicago. Cleveland's next. Deacon Danny'll get 'em if they don't watch out!

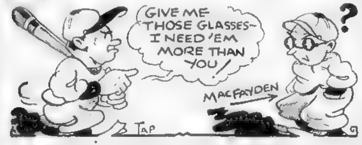
WESTERN CLUBS
"THE GOBLIN'LL GET YE IF YOU DON'T WATCH OUT!"
DEACON DAN MACFAYDEN

A valuable pitcher is Deacon Danny MacFayden. Of the Red Sox' total of 58 victories Danny has won 15. With a tail-end outfit he has scored 15 victories against 12 defeats. Of the 12 defeats something like eight were chalked up early in the season. Since May Danny has been pitching .750 ball. A .750 pitcher is "some" pitcher, brethren and sisteren—"some" pitcher!

Deacon Danny is a local product. Remember when he and "Shanty" Hogan were both pitching for Somerville high? Yes Hogan, one of the greatest backstops in the majors, broke into baseball as a pitcher. He used to alternate in the box with MacFayden for Somerville high. Both were hitters then. When one wasn't pitching he was playing in the outfield. Hogan has been walloping the ball just as promiscuously in the majors. In fact Shanty wasn't satisfied with merely walloping the ball. He recently attempted to wallop Len Knowles, Giant trainer, as well MacFayden lost his batting eye after becoming a big leaguer. As long as Deacon Danny is pitching the way he has been, Bob Quinn should worry.

When Shanty Hogan invaded the big leagues he was a pitcher, just like MacFayden. Davey Bancroft, then manager of the Braves, gave him the once over. He said Shanty was too slow to be an outfielder and hadn't enough stuff to pitch. Bancroft farmed him out to Lynn, with instructions for King Bader to transform him into a catcher. Bader did a good job. John McGraw has been cheering and the rest of the managers moaning ever since. Jawn is moaning a bit over Shanty's attempt to pick "Doc" Knowles apart and slapped a fine and suspension on the Somerville boy. But you'll find Shanty back with the bells on.

Deacon Danny MacFayden is a rather unique chap in more ways than one. He is one of the few bespectacled pitchers in captivity. But it is the batters who need the glasses! He is one of the few players who hopped right out of high school ranks into the majors. Deacon Danny served no college, sandlot or minor league apprenticeship. He graduated right from high school into the majors.



GIVE ME THOSE GLASSES—I NEED 'EM MORE THAN YOU!
MACFAYDEN
TAP

When MacFayden left dear old Somerville for the Red Sox he only weighed 145 pounds. He scales around 170 pounds now. That isn't very hefty, and in baseball he is considered to have rather a "frail" build for a pitcher. But the batters agree there is nothing frail about his pitching. To be sure, Danny used to have a habit of weakening and blowing up along about the seventh inning. But he has cured himself of it.

Judgment of pace has made MacFayden the great pitcher he really is. He has learned how to relax and not to "bear down" except in the pinches. Danny is a curve ball thrower and he used to "bear down" from the start. He used to pitch himself out. That was the reason for those old seventh-inning blowups. Now Deacon Danny justs coasts along until the hassocks get too full and the support gets shaky. Then he cuts loose and bears down. It is a great hitter than can nick Deacon Danny for a hit with men on the hassocks ahead.

Baseball isn't the only sport in which Deacon Danny MacFayden is a star. He was a bit too light for football while at high school, but he shone on the team's hockey squad. He was such a smart hockey player that Hebron Academy, up there in Maine, hired Danny as hockey coach. When October rolls around, the World Series is over, the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock, Deacon Danny hies himself up to Hebron to show 'em how to play hockey. Heigho, it's getting pretty near time for Danny to hit the trail for Hebron. The frost soon will be on the pumpkin and baseball is on the wane.

When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock
Deacon Danny gives up pitching to show kids how puck to knock.
Big league races now are ending and baseball is on the wane,
And it's almost time for Danny to hit trail for dear old Maine.

1ST SCRIMMAGE FOR HARVARD

Climaxing a week of conditioning work, Eddie Casey's Harvard varsity football eleven will scrimmage with a team picked from Jimmy Knox's army of second varsity candidates at Soldiers Field today.

Captain Barry Wood at quarter back will drive a first string eleven consisting of Record and Francisco, ends, Kales and Hardy tackles, Myerson and Talbot guards and Charlie Cunningham center.

Knox's lambs who will be led to the expected slaughter were not to be picked until scrimmage time.

Casey uses today's scrimmage to test the power of the Harvard backs and linemen. He will also watch to see that the new Harvard offense such as the players know of it after a week of study, is clicking smoothly.

The Crimson jerseyed veterans will try the huddle system when on the offence, and Casey will supervise every play as it is run through.

FITTONS IN 1ST GAME OF YEAR

Mayor John J. Murphy will kick off the ball opening the Fitton A. C. semipro football battle with the Roche Club eleven, of Everett at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon, at Dilboy Field, Somerville.

The Roche club last season held the Fittons to a 12 to 0 score.

The Fittons have been practicing strenuously for the past three weeks. Several new faces will be seen in their lineup, including Tony Siano, Fordham; Eddie Melanson, Villanova; Miskinis, Fordham, Vodokolys, Boston College and Elcewicz, Fordham.

All of the Fittons' home games this year will be played at Dilboy Field, Somerville, under the auspices of the Dilboy Post.

Fuller Willing to Fight Callahan

Sammy Fuller, North End lightweight, today issued a statement in which he denied he had run out of his bout with Andy Callahan which was billed by the Argonne A. A. for next Friday night.

Fuller stated that a back injury and a cold makes it impossible for him to go through with the match. Sammy added he is ready to agree on a new date for the bout.

Meanwhile Eddie Mack of the Argonne Club says he will ask the commission to suspend Fuller until such time as he goes through with his contract to battle Callahan.

Called Punch-Drunk Fighter; Gets Divorce

Los Angeles, Sept. 18 (AP)—Cecil Payne of Louisville, Ky., who recently was defeated by Tony Canzoneri in a junior welterweight championship bout, obtained a divorce today from Charlotte Payne.

Payne testified she called him a punch-drunk fighter. They married in February, 1927, and separated in August, 19[illegible].

Chowder Race for Marblehead Yachts

Tomorrow is Chowder Sunday for the Marblehead yachtsmen. Marblehead ends the season with the grand handicap and chowder race of the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Diamond Dust

Infielder Marty McManus, of the Red Sox, was rushed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital immediately after yesterday's doubleheader and had his appendix removed by Dr. Eddie O'Brien, famed surgeon and well known football referee.

McManus had been troubled with a pain in his right side since coming here from Detroit about two weeks ago. He had hoped to avoid the knife until after the season was over but the pain grew worse daily and he was forced to go to the hospital last night.

George Stumpf, rookie sox outfielder from Quincy, Ill., is still among the missing. He was due to report yesterday morning but he has yet to show up. If he gets here in time he will be used in the final game against the Indians at the Fens this afternoon.

The Braves and Pirates play the fifth, rubber and final game of their series in Pittsburgh this afternoon.

Ed Brandt gave the Warriors an even split in Friday's doubleheader by chalking up his 18th victory of the season in the opener by a score of 8 to 2. The Bucs won the nightcap, 4 to 1, Wally Berger's home run of the campaign robbing Heinie Meinie of a shutout.

"Lefty" Grove pitched the world's champion Athletics to a 3 to 1 triumph over the White Sox and now has 30 victories to his credit. That's the largest number of wins turned in by a pitcher since Jim Bagby of Cleveland captured 31 back in 1920. A home run by young Billy Sullivan accounted for the lone Chisox tally.

The Senators and Yanks are still tied for second place, the former having beaten the Tigers in 12 innings and the latter having smothered the Browns.

Babe Ruth is now only one behind Lou Gehrig in the race for the home run crown. The Bambino cracked out his 43d of the year in the third inning against the Browns.

Jack Smith, rookie Sox first-sacker from Toledo, made his first big league hit in the first inning of the first game of Friday's twin-bill and came through with another safety in the nightcap.

Tickets for the Braves-Red Sox exhibition game for the benefit of the unemployed, which will be played at Braves Field next Wednesday, go on sale today at Fenway Park, Braves Field, City Hall and Horace Partridge Co., Franklin st.

$125,000 PURSE FOR FUTURITY

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Three big stakes, headed by the 42d running of the Futurity, saw purses that totalled $160,000 posted at Belmont Park today for the biggest afternoon of the racing season.

The $1[illegible] purse for the Futurity, the most important race of the summer so far as the value to the winner is concerned, had to share interest with the $15,000 Grand National Steeplechase Handicap, and the Jockey Club Gold Cup, which brought Twenty Grand out to compete with two less famous rivals for the $10,000 added prize.

For the Futurity thirteen two-year-olds were named as probable starters.

The favorite was the only filly in the race, C. V. Whitney's unbeaten Top Flight. Coupled with Mad Frump, the Whitney entry was held at 4 to 5. Victor Emanuel's Morfair was rated as second choice at 4 to 1, while the probable odds on Tick On, Mrs. Louis G. Kaufman's winner of the Hopeful, were put at 7.

Twenty Grand, unopposed by his leading rivals of the year, Sun Beau and Mate, was expected to have an easy time of winning the two-mile Gold Cup race.

The only other horses named to start were E. R. Bradley's Barometer and the Wheatley stable's Blenheim. Eight jumpers were named for the rich Grand National.

[illegible] McGraw [illegible] Cincinnati.

Maybe Hogan got dizzy looking for ball players in Cincinnati. We think McGraw was a bit too harsh under the circumstances.

Of course, there is the alleged attack Hogan attempted to make on Doc Knowles, the club trainer. Hogan says the trainer nagged him unreasonably. We suggest Hogan get married. A trainer's nagging will then sound like sweet music.

Frank Hogan might follow the example of Art Shires, and enter the ring. All he'd need would be a nagging manager, and he'd probably kill his opponent.

Is Jack Dempsey fighting or just slinging bananas? He licked five men in his last start.

The Red Sox and Braves do so well at the end of the season that they should start playing in January, and then when the season opens the following April, just imagine that they are finishing a season. They would then win the flags before the Fourth of July.

Eddie Mack is all steamed up because he alleges that Sammy F[illegible] of [illegible] match with Andy Callahan. Eddie would be national marathon champ if he chased all the boys who ran out on him.

A reader encloses a clipping which stated that a wrestler fell out of the ring, hurt his head and was carried out unconscious. Penned on the clipping was the comment, "I don't believe it. What do you think?"

As the reader failed to specify whether we believed that a wrestler could get hurt by falling on his head, or whether he could become unconscious, we regret we cannot answer the question.

The Madison Square Garden Corp., after a disastrous year, plans to build a new fight arena in Jersey City. The Garden can be sure of a crowd there, as that is the official headquarters of mosquitos.

Tigers, Indians Waiting for Finish

The White Sox battled hard, but the Tigers didn't exert themselves, and the Indians, with the exception of Averill and Porter, are merely waiting for the final whistle.

If the Browns, who come here tomorrow to open a three-game series, also lack ambition, "Shono" Collins is not only going to lead the natives out of the cellar for the first time since 1924 but he'll pull them right up to the top of the second division.

The Browns will [illegible] their three games in two days, a double header being carded for Braves Field tomorrow and a single game for the Fens on Monday.

Since the Sox will be through at home as far as regularly scheduled games are concerned after this series and the Braves will not play next Friday, Bob Quinn has decided to make next Monday a Ladies' Day.

Tomorrow will be Irving Burns' Day at the Wigwam. The popular Browns' first-sacker is a native of Cambridge, and a resident of Roxbury, and his many Greater Boston friends and admirer are going to honor him in a big way during the Sabbath double-header.

This is Burns' first year in the majors and he stands out as one of the best initial basemen in the circuit. He's a swell fielder and he hits well and hard. And he's a [illegible] to boot.

The Ladies' Day crowd saw the Sox win their second doubleheader of the season.

You should be able to step up to your ball and take your position for the stroke without giving very much active thought to it. If you have trouble assuming this position the chances are it results from the lack of definite idea with regard to the placing of your feet. Your indecision in the matter results from the discomfort of which you are aware each time you swing. RINDGE TO TEST SALEM ELEVEN

While college teams have another week in which to prepare for the opening of the season, the local schoolboy football year will be inaugurated today.

The schedule for the opening day is light, with only 16 games listed. About half these games are of great interest to the followers of [scho]olboy sports, inasmuch as several teams which are likely contenders for the schoolboy grid title [illegible] test.

Medford high will open with [illegible]

Malden High Team Under New Coach

Under Ed Goodreau, who died a few months ago, Malden was in the foremost ranks in the schoolboy grid world. Malden has enjoyed unusual success, and has been the schooling place for many a college star. Whether McGuirk can live up to Goodreau's achievements is a question.

McGuirk was a star at Boston College and knows the game as few players do. He has the ability and the material, and is likely to land Malden at or near the top by the time the season closes.

Andy Callahan K.O.'s Cananare in Sixth

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 19—Andy Callahan of Lawrence dropped Joe Cananare of Lewiston in the sixth [illegible] of their scheduled 10-round battle here.

Callahan was all over Cananare, dropping the Maine battler four times in the fourth round. A short left hook sent Cananare to the canvas for the final count in the sixth stanza.

Callahan weighed 144, and Cananare 147 when they stepped into the ring.

[illegible] and Norman Kellenberger tied with 78s for low [illegible] Brae Burn yesterday [illegible] short putt on the [illegible] green for a 77.

Of the first 131 starters in the two-day Brae Burn invitation, there were 101 "no cards." From the back tees, Brae Burn is too much of a test for the open tournament players. From the back tee, the 18th hole is a back breaker.

Peter McDermott, who came from Rothesay, Scotland, will play Eddie Carleton a 36-hole match for the championship of the Maynard Country Club next Sunday.

Walter Ring has been made general confidential sales manager of the United States for the L. A. Young Co. of Detroit, makers of Walter Hagen golf products. Walter Ring is a Bostonian and his hundreds of friends will be pleased to learn of the rapid advancement he has made since he has been connected with the L. A. Young Co.

[illegible] New England [illegible] was the originator of this classic and is the champion for the third time.

The Left Handers' championship caught Grif Fallon, the titleholder so far off his game that he did not weather the first day of match play.

MR. BOSTON

—By JACK CONWAY—

Jack Dempsey was having breakfast in one of those tank towns where he is giving boxing exhibitions. The old Tiger took a peek at the waiter.

"I have seen you some place before," remarked Dempsey.

"You're right," was the quick reply. "I'm one of the fellows you knocked out last night."

I know plenty of birds who are not waiters who will take one of Dempsey's punches right on the chin for $500.

Gene Cla[illegible] to be a boxing promoter, has bought a hotel in Gardner. Gene once booked Jack Dempsey around the New England circuit.

New Spot for Bruen

John I. Day, owner of the New York Press, tells me Frank Bruen is building a race track at Coral Gables, Fla. Bruen will open his race meeting on December 19 and keep going until Hialeah gets underway on January 11. He will be right back on the job again with another race meeting when Hialeah [fol]ds up on March 3. This second meeting will last through March 31.

Bruen used to manage the Hialeah track for Joseph E. Widener. Frank was also for two years general manager of the New York Garden.

I do not look for anybody to make a great deal of money in Florida during the coming season. Such playful pastimes as betting on horse-racing and paying top prices to attend boxing matches are luxuries which are easily dispensed with.

The Carnera-Maloney bout, the big boxing attraction in Florida last winter, was a flop financially.

Johnston Heard From

Jimmy Johnston, Boy Bandit, has sent me one of his placards advertising the 15-round bout between Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera, which will be staged at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on Oct. 1. Johnston does not attempt to tell an intelligent public that Carnera is the greatest fighter in the world. Instead his poster reads:

"Carnera, the pugilistic enigma! Can he really fight? (Sharkey is the test). If Carnera wins, the world's heavyweight championship, fame and fortune await him. Losing, back to the circus with the rest of the freaks."

Johnston knows that the desire to see if Primo can really fight is what will attract the fans to Ebbets Field.

Johnston is more terse in writing about Sharkey. He says:

"Sharkey will fight desperately to remain the top man in the heavyweight class."

Johnston, by the way, has made more money than any other boxing promoter during the outdoor season. His profits to date are $30,000.

Paul Bowser, wrestling promoter, suffered a severe leg injury while racing his horse this summer. Paul expects a few weeks more rest will put him back in good condition again.

SPORTS REEL

School fans' cheers roll out today at the Malden high stadium when Lloyd Tupper sends the ball far into Lynn G. E. Apprentice territory. Tupper is the mighty mite of Malden football. He's a great little fullback. And a strong cog for Warren McGuirk's Golden Tornado eleven. All Scholastic honors are Lloyd's goal. Watch him go!

"Safe," yelled Umpire Van Graflin as Tom Oliver of the Red Sox spilled third baseman Hale of the Indians. Oliver was one of the heroes of the fighting Red Sox double Friday victory. The Sox paraded into a sixth place tie with Detroit as a result. Just a few wins more and they'll hold fifth.

JEALOUSY IS SERPENT THAT LURKS UNDER ROSE OF LOVE

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN A MAN'S love dies a sudden and unexpected death, it is usually due to asphyxiation from the [illegible] gas of a woman's jealousy.

Jealousy is the serpent that lurks under the rose of love in nearly every little Eden.

A man's love is seldom starved to death, or frozen to death; [illegible] always stifled to death. Blowing the cold winds of indifference on its passion merely fans the flames. But one touch of jealousy acts like a [illegible].

HELEN ROWLAND.

A man is never as jealous as a woman; because once he has permitted a woman to love him, he cannot, in his sublime self-confidence, imagine how she could possibly want anything better.

Jealousy is the admission of an inferiority complex; and as far as a woman is concerned no man has an inferiority complex. It is never a mystery to him why a woman should love him. The only thing that could astonish him would be to discover that she had STOPPED loving him.

When a woman shows the first spark of jealousy, she flatters the other woman, and insults herself. Many a man would never know that he had ceased to love a woman if she did not keep reminding him of it.

A man may be jealous of another man. But a woman is subconsciously jealous of EVERYTHING.

It is positively STIFLING! Woman's desire to absorb every corner of a man's heart and mind and thoughts is the tie that binds and binds and BINDS, until it chokes him.

A man is like a cat; he cannot be tied. And nothing so quickly gives him that TIED feeling as a woman's jealousy.

A woman may tread all over a man's heart with cruelty, selfishness, coquetry and caprice, without killing his love; but at the first tiny breath of jealousy it will flicker out and gasp its last.

Man is a free, free soul, filled with the spirit of Pan. As long as he feels unfettered, he may not care to roam; but at the first touch of a leash, the first suspicion of a "claim," he is off—to the other woman.

Jealousy and "It" cannot exist under the same marcel wave; for "It" is based upon perfect self-assurance. And jealousy is always an admission of self-doubt. If you can't have faith in a man, at least have faith in YOURSELF. Don't hand the other woman all the trumps in the pack by being jealous!

Value of X-Ray to Medical Science

By Dr. R. S. COPELAND.

ON NOVEMBER 8, 1895, after many trying, unsuccessful experiments, Dr. Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen discovered the X-ray. This discovery has enabled man to combat many diseases and to extend life when without it it would have been impossible.

Dr. Copeland

When this discovery was first announced there were all sorts of misconceptions regarding its nature and uses. People at first were under the impression that by means of a certain lens it would be possible to visualize anything and everything anywhere. In fact, a bill was introduced in one of the state legislatures, proposing to prohibit the use of X-rays and opera glasses at the theaters.

At first the X-ray was used to locate foreign bodies in the body, such as bullets and needles, and to study fractures of the bones. It is now used in every branch of medicine.

It actually points to the location of tumors and cancers. It has been used even in obstetrics, where it may show the size of the pelvis and thus eliminate many of the dangers of childbirth.

MASQUERADE ❖❖ By FAITH BALDWIN

Tony Killed Trying to Escape

COLLIN spoke [illegible]. But he looked years younger. Mrs. Carstairs was talking; she had made her connection; it had gone through without difficulty at that late dawn-approaching hour. She was speaking [illegible]. They could not hear her words. After what seemed a long time during which there was silence in the library she came back to them. Her face was flushed and her eyes very red.

"He lied," she said to Fanchon. "Evelyn—died. And under the name of Miss Smith. She is buried out there. There is a death certificate. All necessary proof. We will go out," she said softly, "and bring her home."

Fanchon screamed, suddenly, her hand clenched to her mouth [illegible] her nerves taut to the breaking point.

"Now," he ended defiantly, "what are you going to do with me? With her?"

He turned to Collin as he spoke.

"While you are thinking," remarked Tony suddenly, "I'd like a breath of fresh air!"

He rose, quite free. His hand was still holding the cigarette he had burned through the cord about his legs. He plunged through the doors onto the terrace. There were fire escapes around on the other part of the roof. There was a crash of glass. Collin leaped through the broken windows after him, heedless of his bare feet. The women stayed where they were, held by shock. Fanchon, her knees breaking under her, slid to the floor and somehow got to Mrs. Carstairs on her knees.

"Will you ever forgive me?" she said. "Collin—I'm afraid for him."

The other woman laid a hand on her hair.

"Hush. Collin is armed," she said softly . . . "wait . . ."

She rose and went forward to ring for Jameson, to arouse the night watchman also. But there was a scream. A high-pitched, terrible scream. Mrs. Carstairs stood still. Her hand was on the bell. Every vestige of color had drained from her face. Her face was gray and empty. "Not—Collin . . . ?" she asked softly—"not —Collin . . ."

Someone stood at the shattered French window. It was Collin. He was white. He spoke hoarsely. The gun was limp in his hand.

"Over the parapet to the flat roof"—he said, dully—"I didn't fire . . . then . . . I waited till he was by the fire escape . . . he pulled a knife on me . . . I . . . fired . . . He has fallen," said Collin, "to the street . . ."

When Fanchon awoke it was to sunlight, subdued by drawn blinds. A strange woman sat beside her . . . a woman in white with a pleasant, intent face. The woman's fingers lay lightly on her wrist.

"Collin?" whispered Fanchon.

The woman said smiling:

"You're not to talk. But I am to tell you that everything is all right. You are to take this and sleep . . . and when you wake you may see Mrs. Carstairs."

But finally the day came when Jennie was permitted to—talk.

"You need have no fear," she said. "He—the man—died instantly. The bullet did not reach him. He missed his footing and fell. It was the fall that killed him. There was a seven days' wonder when it was revealed by police and press that 'Cesare Gilli' was the notorious Antonio Francesconi. There is a reward. Yours," she said. "Your old knowledge of him is known to no one but us."

Fanchon shuddered, and lifted her thin hand.

"No—no—" she whispered.

"I understand. Claim it, for charity, then," said Jennie, "and after you are better we are taking you South. And then to France, where you will get back your strength, quickly . . ."

The tears poured down Fanchon's face. Tears of weakness. She said, brokenly:

"But I have no right—"

"Never mind that. . . . Do you love Collin, Fanchon?"

"With all my heart," she said.

"Then haven't you—every right?" asked Jennie.

As soon as she could be moved safely Fanchon was taken South. To a quiet little place in Florida, to a small lonely house, set among the palms. Miss Gibbon, the nurse, went with her; and Jennie; and Collin and some of the servants. And it was all dreamlike. And slowly her strength came back.

"We can sail in two weeks," Collin told her one evening. "The doctor says we may."

She looked up at the great stars and the slender scimitar of the moon. There was a little Gulf wind in the palm trees. She heard the sound of water.

"Collin?" she said desperately.

"What is it, darling?"

"I—I—"

"No, don't say it. Whatever it is, I love you. We will be married before we sail, very quietly."

He took her into his arms and kissed her.

After a while Jennie came out to them and they sat there together planning their allied future. Fanchon closed her eyes against the brightness of the stars. To belong . . . forever. To Collin. To have the mother she had always longed for. Poor Tony, she thought, dreamily, pity for him welling up in her heart—and poor Evelyn.

But they were dead. And she was gloriously alive.

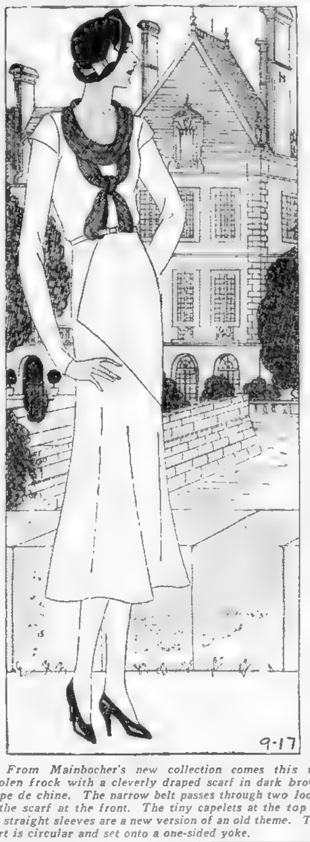
DRAPING THE SCARF

Over a Tan Frock by Mainbocher

Sketched in Paris



From Mainbocher's new collection comes this tan woolen frock with a cleverly draped scarf in dark brown crepe de chine. The narrow belt passes through two loops in the scarf at the front. The tiny capelets at the top of the straight sleeves are a new version of an old theme. The skirt is circular and set onto a one-sided yoke.

Indiscreet Love Letters of a Too-Handsome Man

By WINIFRED BLACK

THEY FOUND him dead in his smart apartment on the left bank of the Seine in Paris the other day—the handsome young Spaniard who'd been turning the heads of women in the gay restaurants, for, oh, two or three years.

Winifred Black

Young he was and entirely too good-looking to be quite wholesome.

Tall and straight and broad shouldered, and, oh, girls, his eyes—they were liquid fire, and the things he could say with them, ay-di-mi!

And to see him do the tango—long step, dip, swirl, turn, hesitate, long step again with a swooning grace and the tiger-like lightness of step, that—oh, well, what's the use.

Every other woman who saw him fell in love with him, and if the woman had money or had friends who had money, or was the wife of a rich man or the daughter of a millionaire the Handsome Spaniard fell in love with her, too—at first sight.

The woman was [illegible] and landed.

And then somehow or other he persuaded her to write him a letter. A letter that was anything but discreet—or there was a photograph of a subject [illegible] quite fully dressed perhaps [illegible] a pose that would not be looked upon as exactly proper by the superintendent of the Sunday [illegible] back home.

And then—blackmail.

Money, pearls, diamonds—he could always get imitations set in place of the real stones that the husband, or the father or the brother would never suspect.

More money, more [illegible] more—and the other day [illegible] victim grew tired of his greed and cruelty and killed him.

And when the police found him lying there in his gorgeous [illegible] embroidered dressing gown, they found two or three cases crammed with letters.

Letters from girls of eighteen or twenty, whose parents thought a glimpse of Parisian cafe life would broaden their minds.

Letters from young women married to rich old men. Letters from middle-aged women with hard-working husbands at home, and no "romance" in their lives.

Witty letters, wicked letters, poor stupid, silly letters, but love letters, every one of them worth 50 times its weight in gold to the poor foolish creature who wrote it.

It would be interesting to know why the police never interfered with the handsome Spaniard and his way of life.

It appears they knew about it all the time.

I wonder how many women read about the death of the handsome Spaniard and how many of them breathed a deep sigh of relief.

But what would they give to slip into that room over there in Paris, every one of them and get some one particular note, and watch it burn to ashes right before their eyes—poor foolish things.

Daily True Story

Shadow of Death

CHET CUDDLED his cheek against the stock of the rifle and waited. They would be coming soon. It was less than a hundred feet to the path from the rock behind which he was hiding. He couldn't miss.

He heard their voices and his finger curled around the trigger. He fitted his body closer to the ground and began to tense his muscles.

He'd show that fellow Harmon what it meant to run around with a mountain girl and then go off and leave her. By thunder he would! Maybe people didn't do that sort of thing any more, even up in the mountains. But he wouldn't [illegible] him. Hadn't he seen [illegible] last night because Harmon was leaving. There was only one reason why a girl cried when a man went away.

It had been different before Harmon came. Then Jane had been his girl and everybody knew that some day they would marry. [illegible] that. [illegible] of course.

Jane was [illegible] as sweet as he ever had been and she didn't seem to realize what was happening but Chet knew she was drifting away from him. She didn't seem to think that it made any difference that she should have an engagement with Harmon when Chet wanted to see her.

Harmon No Friend

Chet Would End It

All this passed through Chet's mind as he waited. Maybe he thought the trouble went farther back than the coming of Harmon, because Jane had been different ever since she had gone away to school and made those new friends, who came to visit her from time to time.

Well he'd end that. Harmon hadn't proved to be a friend. He had won Jane's heart and then he had broken it by leaving. [illegible] way she should Jane have been crying the night before when Chet had stood near the porch in the darkness after Harmon had left her and entered the house?

Chet's finger suddenly tightened about the trigger.

He could see them now. Harmon [illegible] his hat in his hand and Jane was carrying his suitcase. That was the kind of man he was—to let a girl carry a suitcase for him. They were walking slowly down the path that led to the station where Harmon would take the train. Only he wouldn't—not now.

Squarely between the sights Chet could see Harmon's bare head. More and more his finger tightened.

The trigger began to move.

He squeezed a little more. Just a hair now. Then death.

He couldn't do it. Suddenly, overwhelmingly, came the realization that he couldn't do it. He couldn't kill a man from ambush like that. Not even a man like Harmon.

Chet dropped his head on his arms. The muzzle of the rifle clinked softly against the rock. Jane and Harmon [illegible] on. The sound of their voices died away. Still Chet lay there in the [illegible] reaction.

It seemed ages later when he heard the [illegible] of a whistle and then the puffing of a train as it wound its way up through the valley. In the [illegible] he could hear it stop and he wondered if Jane were crying again as she said good-bye to Harmon.

Then it started again. Harmon was gone.

Chet [illegible] Jane would be coming back [illegible] his rifle [illegible] covering it with leaves. He could come back [illegible] and get it. He walked down to the path and waited.

He was still waiting when Jane came back. Her head was [illegible]ing out when she looked up [illegible] of tears about her eyes [illegible] had [illegible].

Crying for Ellen

Harmon Can't Be Cured

[illegible]

"Oh, Chet," she said, "it just breaks my heart."

"You mean Harmon?" he asked tersely.

"Yes," she answered. "Poor man. And poor Ellen. She's really the one I'm crying for. I know what it will mean to her when he goes back and tells her."

For a moment Chet didn't answer. He didn't understand.

"Who is Ellen?" he finally asked.

"Oh, I haven't told you, have I?" she said. "But he asked me not to while he was here—Mr. Harmon, I mean. He was very sensitive about it. You see, the doctor has told him there is no hope, that not even the mountain air could cure him. He's too far gone. That's why he came up here. Ellen—she was one of my best friends in school—wrote me and asked me to be good to him. And now he has to go back and tell her he can't be cured. He has consumption. And they were going to be married. Every time I think of it it makes me cry."

Chet didn't answer. He merely [illegible] and [illegible] her head [illegible] in his own eyes as he thought how close he [illegible].

The Road Back

By ERICH REMARQUE

penetrating my [illegible]. I move my hand, turn my head, my muscles brace themselves and a [illegible] [illegible] from my knees to my belly, a ferment like sherbet in my [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in the [illegible] [illegible] storm [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] then [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible]. Slowly I put my hand on Ludwig's hand and feel that [illegible] him [illegible] when he looks up worn and pale as ever and I can [illegible] of what is [illegible] within me is merely to stammer: "Have you a cigarette, Ludwig?"

He gives me one. The [illegible] while the [illegible] we go on singing. A [illegible] [illegible] than the rattle of the wheels gradually [illegible] with our songs and in a pause there comes a [illegible] crash that travels rolling in long reverberations over the plain. Clouds have gathered, a thunder storm [illegible]. The flashes of lightning dazzle like [illegible] [illegible]. Kosole stands in the window and shakes his head. "Now for another sort of thunder storm!" he mutters and leans far out. "Quick! see! There she is!" he suddenly cries.

We press round. At the [illegible] of the land in the glare of lightning the [illegible] slender towers of the city pierce the sky. Then darkness [illegible] over them again in the [illegible] but with every flash they come nearer.

Our eyes shine with excitement. Expectancy has suddenly [illegible] amongst us within us like a [illegible] [illegible] talk. Kosole gropes for his things. "Oh boy," says he stretching his arms, "where shall we all be sitting a year hence, I wonder."

The city has sprung upon us, gathered us to herself. There she lies panting under the wild light, outstretched, inviting. And we are coming to her, a trainload of soldiers, a trainload of home-coming men out of the limbo of [illegible], a trainload of tense expectancy, nearer and nearer. The train [illegible] along, the walls leap out against us, in a moment we [illegible] [illegible] flashes of lightning, the thunder roars. Then the station rises up on both sides of the carriage seething with noise and [illegible] a pelting rain is falling, the platform gleams with the wet. [illegible] we jump out [illegible].

As I spring out of the door the dog follows. He presses close after me and together we run through the rain down the steps.

SAILORS RUSH IN

In front of the station we scatter like a bucket of water pitched out on the pavement. Kosole sets off at a sharp pace with Bröger and Trosske down Heinrich st. With Ludwig I turn rapidly into Station ave. Without waiting any time in farewell, Leiderhose and his rag and bone shop have already gone like a shot. Jupp and Valentin alone have any leisure. No one is awaiting their arrival, so they take a preliminary saunter around the station on the off chance of finding some grub. They intend later on to go to the barracks.

Water is dripping from trees along [illegible] [illegible] low and drive swiftly over. Some [illegible] of the latest [illegible] to be called up [illegible]. They are wearing red armbands. "Off with his shoulder straps!" yells one making a grab at Ludwig.

"Shut your mouth, you warbaby!" I say, as I shove him off.

Others press in and surround us. Ludwig [illegible] calmly at the foremost of them and goes on his way. The fellow steps aside. Then two sailors appear and rush at him.

"You swine! Can't you see he's wounded?" I shout, flinging off my pack to get freer play with my hands. But Ludwig is down already, what with the wound in his arm he is as good as defenseless. The sailors trample on him, rip at his uniform. "A lieutenant!" screeches a woman's voice. "Kick him to death, the dirty blood hound!"

Before I can come to his assistance I get a blow in the face that makes me stagger. I crouch and with all my weight I plant my head in [illegible] stomach. He [illegible] over. Immediately [illegible] others fall on me and [illegible] me down. I [illegible] knives out [illegible].

WILD WITH RAGE

Between the trampling legs I can see Ludwig with his free left hand [illegible] the sailor whom he has brought down by giving him a crack behind the knees. He still [illegible] on, though the others are [illegible] with all their [illegible]. Then some one swipes me over the head with a belt buckle [illegible] on my teeth. [illegible] him by the [illegible] we are [illegible] the [illegible] knocks down [illegible] and would tread [illegible]. Wild with rage I try [illegible]. But at that [illegible] of the attackers [illegible] the pavement [illegible]. A second crash [illegible] unconscious and [illegible]. The [illegible] meaning. Willy is on the [illegible].

He [illegible] up at long [illegible] off [illegible] as he ran [illegible] standing over us [illegible] them in twos by the [illegible] one in each hand and [illegible] their heads together. [illegible] knocked out on [illegible] Willy gets mad [illegible] hammer. We [illegible] jump up but the attackers [illegible] off. I [illegible] manage to [illegible] a blow in the [illegible] with my pack and then turn to look after Ludwig.

But Willy is in full pursuit. He saw [illegible] two sailors who made the first attack on Ludwig. One now [illegible] blue and [illegible] and like a flying hurricane [illegible] hot on the heels of the other.

Ludwig's arm has been trampled on and the blood [illegible] oozing through the bandage. His face is smeared with mud and his forehead torn [illegible]. He [illegible] himself down and [illegible]. "Hurt much?" I ask him. He [illegible] pale, he shakes his head.

LIKE A SACK

In the meantime Willy has captured the sailor and is lugging him along like a sack.

"You cow!" he storms. "There you've been sitting in your ships, taking the summer air all the war, and never have heard so much as a shot fired; and now you think it's time for you to open your beer trap and attack frontline soldiers, do you?—You let me catch you!—Kneel down and ask his pardon!"

He [illegible] down before Ludwig with an air ferocious enough to put fear into any man. "I'll tear you to bits!" Kneel! Down on your knees!"

The man whimpers. "Let him alone, Willy," says Ludwig, picking up his things.

"What says Billy incredulously. "Are you mad?" After they've trampled all over your arm!"

Ludwig is ready to go. "Ach, let him go—

For a moment Willy continues [illegible] at Ludwig, then, with a [illegible] of his head he releases the [illegible]. "[illegible] you are then. Now [illegible]." But he cannot resist letting [illegible] at the last moment and giving the fellow a [illegible] that sends him through a double somersault.

* * *

We [illegible] on our way. Willy curses. He must talk when he is angry. But Ludwig is silent.

Suddenly we see the gang of [illegible] coming back at [illegible] the corner of Peer st. They have gathered reinforcements.

Willy [illegible] his rifle. "Load and prepare to fire!" says he, his eyes narrowing. Ludwig draws out his revolver and I also put my gun in readiness. Until now it has merely been a free fight, but this time is going to be earnest. We do not mean to be attacked a second time.

Another Popeye 'Knockout' in Next Saturday's Evening American—Don't Miss It!

BROADCASTING BRIEFS

Both Networks Hear From Boston

By N. F. T.

What a night, what a night! Radio circles just spread out in a widened circumference after supper last evening—Boston was the center of it all and a lot took place within our historic municipal bounds. About the best thing Boston does is make history.

* * *

Morton Downey, Tony Wons, Jacques Renard and a sizeable group of accompanying CBS talent arrived on schedule. It was rumored that two locomotives would be hitched to the string of cars, but a lone choo choo made it. Everything went off according to the way it was planned. Tony and Mort put over a corking quarter hour from the Buckminster. Later on both boys took graceful bows at Jacob Samuel Stavitsky's (in other words Jacques Renard) night club.

NO "GOOD NIGHTS" SAID

While the reception accorded this radio trio was one lasting through a full evening and into early morning hours, it was not extended to the degree that things were during the 10th anniversary celebration at WBZ studios. Hands moving around the clock didn't mean a thing to John Clark and his crew. They just carried on and on and on.

* * *

Those of us engaged in writing about such things are somewhat tired out today. The broadcasters made us step lively from one spot in town to another.

* * *

Among the things discovered is that WBZ and WNAC have engineering bosses with the same name. Phil (WBZ) Robinson and Irving (WNAC) Robinson are no relation to each other, but have been great friends for years. Another name coincidence is that of a Mr. Harris who was in town yesterday representing the sponsor of Morton Downey. Mr. Harris was constantly in the company of Mr. Harrison, the Yankee Network live wire.

IN TWO PARTS

More Radio talkies are on the schedule for this afternoon and tomorrow. "Bad Company" is the title of a dramatic offering being aired in two episodes. The first is being matinee-ed today at 3 o'clock, with a continuation listed on the Sunday schedule for 2:15 p. m. Both will be heard through WBZ and are based on the current RKO photoplay of the same name, starring Ricardo Cortez and Helen Twelvetrees.

* * *

Don't be surprised at all if the next day or so brings the news that John Herrick has become contractually annexed by WNAC and affiliated stations.

WELL DONE

While on the subject of John Herrick, how many heard him hum the refrain, "Indian Love Call," while Ranny Weeks and his musickers played it on their 9:30 program through WEEI last night? Guess you'll wonder how your Uncle N. F. T. happened to catch it, what with the Morton Downey doings, WBZ birthday party and everything. Well, he did, what's more, Earl Nelson gets an O. K. in capital letters for his rendition of "Shine on Harvest Moon" during the same half hour.

* * *

Russ Columbo has not been signed for three years by his coffee-making sponsors as may have been read elsewhere. His arrangement is for three weeks.

* * *

When Acting Mayor McGrath greeted Morton Downey at City Hall yesterday, his acting honor requested a song right there in the office. Mort warbled "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and not much work was done anywhere in the hall while he did so.

On the Air

An address by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, designed to enlighten Americans on the British financial and economic crisis, will be heard on the CBS Thursday at 8 . . . Six broadcasts in connection with the American Legion convention in Detroit will be NBC-ed next week. Floyd Gibbons will participate in four of them and the parade will be described by John S. Young . . . New radio stations will be born in New England, and Manchester, N. H., is likely the locale for one of them. The Radio Commission is engaged in trying to overcome this section's "dead spots," where radio has no coverage.

Count Felix von Luckner, adventurer and lecturer, and Joan Lowell, author of "Cradle of the Deep," are guest speakers o'er WBZ at 9:30 this eve . . . Sen. Brookhart discusses a p'gram of legislation for the coming session of Congress, WNAC at 9:30 tonight . . . Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord and David Sarnoff, radio rulers, speak on the NBC next week . . . The Eight Sons of Eli, who vocalized for Theater of the Air last week, have forsaken their Alma Mater for a CBS commercial to start the 27th.

NBC is getting mixed on policies. It boasts about Carveth Wells, big game debunker, in one breath, and in the next offers an adventure b'cast called "The Land of Wonder and Fear," to start tomorrow o'er WJZ at 10:15. Then, the network has another debunker signed. He is Corey Ford, humorist, who will start a series entitled "Making Africa Safe for Africans" the 30th.

MORTON DOWNEY chews gum, probably to keep the million dollar throat moist . . . JACQUES RENARD goes in for cigars . . . RUDY VALLEE'S voice is getting lower . . . IRENE BEASLEY brags about her sister who will soon be CBS-ed. . . . COL. STOOPNAGLE is working on a cellophane umbrella which permits its owner to look up through it to see whether or not it is raining . . . MURIEL POLLOCK claims she saw NELLIE REVELL teaching a Long Island life saver to swim.

Early Models Help British Auto Men

Washington, Sept. 19—British automotive business has been given some stimulus by early introduction of new models, according to trade reports received in the Commerce Department's Automotive Division.

Sales of "baby" class are expanding. Several manufacturers have introduced new low-power models. Production of private cars during half year is estimated at approximately 98,700 compared with 98,000 during the same period of last year.

Financial Market News and Comment

—SPECTATOR—

Says:

With earnings and freight car loadings at subnormal proportions, and with forthcoming dividend meetings likely to witness further downward revisions in rates, there apparently is no tangible reason to anticipate improved market action by this group.

The one ace in the hole for the bull faction is the possibility of favorable rate action by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Westinghouse

The surprise in Westinghouse's putting the common on a $2.50 basis, which was more than expected, brought a good deal of suspicion in speculative quarters on the permanency of this rate in view of earnings. Westinghouse, it would seem, would do well to end the year out of the red. There was a big loss in the first quarter. However, the next dividend meeting is three months away and a lot can happen before then. Which suggests that the current phase of the deflation of the stock is over.

One of the most important and respected bankers downtown is quoted as declaring that the turn in business has either come or is so close that it won't be long delayed.

Out They Go

Forced liquidation from banks has been playing a big part in this market, it is stated in reliable quarters. "Freezing" of the German credits is given as one reason and decline in the German reparation bond issues another. Both, it is pointed out, would force many banks to call in loans to maintain liquid ratios, which would frequently entail forced selling of securities.

* * *

Bond men report a decidedly better undertone in the bond market. Bids have been appearing in issues which only a few days ago had a wide spread.

Here and There

The bears are again reviving the old story about the safety of the Johns Manville dividend . . . 'Tis said a large short interest is purposely being maintained in Steel to cushion the stock . . . One of the leading bears is reported selling in Loew's. If true, he seems to have picked a tartar for the issue is well regarded . . . Accumulation is understood to be goin on in Warner Bros. . . . Interests close to American Tobacco feel the stock is cheap here . . . Decline in United Aircraft has carried it to a critical point. Breaking 20 would endanger the low . . . There has been good scale buying in the tractions.

—STATE ST.—

Hears:

That the selling today was of climatic proportions. Many issues showed surprising resistance and the "Street" expects a rally will be built around the firm spots early next week.

Sterling and Selling

Not only in observing countries but in England as well there has been an increasing feeling that the pound sterling will have to be further bulwarked. The disturbing feature to the English investor is the possibility his government might borrow private securities for use as collateral. Accordingly there has been a widespread disposal of American securities and a resultant substitution of American dollars.

Atchison and Union Pacific are world wide issues and have been in favor in every large financial center for years. As the need of cash to protect holdings at home became increasingly acute, shares of both companies were thrown on the New York market.

Rails

Now that signs of a selling climax are more evident the more sober students of the market are investigating the rallying possibilities of the various groups. Realizing the rails, and in particular the second grade carriers, have bee drastically deflated they are preparing to make commitments on definite signs distress selling is culminating.

Pullman and a 16 per cent yield are making some investors rub their eyes. It seems almost unbelievable that the former favorite could go so completely to pieces. Company is still strong financially but freight and passenger business remains at a minimum.

Boardroom Briefs

Peoples Gas offerings are from interests who think the return too lean at current levels...One commentator thinks the bottom will be distinguished by the collapse of the high priced blue chips that have resisted deflation to date...Traders are cautioned to resist the "financial blues" if and when share values start "falling out of bed"... Allied Chemical will be in demand by scale orders from 86 on down...

Long term investors who are willing to accumulate equities within the bottom range, without expecting to get stocks at the bottom prices, are advised to start accumulation when the well-known industrial average strikes 105.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE ACTIVE

Stocks were active and lower in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange with many new lows being set. Changes ranged from fractions to 7 points with Edison Electric registering the major decline at 235.

American Telephone was again punished by the bears and closed at 141½, only fractionally above its low for the day and down over 4 points from its previous closing level to a new low for the year.

New Lows for the year were set by Brown Durrell, General Electric, Warren Brothers, United Shoe Gillette, United Fruit, International Hydro Electric, Torrington and Shawmut Association.

Kreuger & Toll, Nash, New England Telephone, New Haven and Pacific Mills all were at new 1931 bottoms. Fractional declines were shown for American Woolen preferred, Amoskeag, Boston Elevated and Boston Personal Property.

Utilities Lower in Big Curb Market

New York, Sept. 19—Active shares set new lows on the curb today. Utilities were down, with Electric Bond losing 2 points and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore off 4 points. Other utilities sagged a point or so. Cities Service eased fractionally. Aluminum was off 4.

LEADERS AGAIN SELL LOWER IN WALL ST.

New York, Sept. 19—Leaders again sold lower in Wall st. today. The closing was weak with losses of 1 to 5 points recorded in important issues. Volume was the largest for a week-end session in several months, totaling approximately 2,400,000 shares.

The fall in stocks was broken by extensive bear repurchases, and losses were less severe than yesterday's

U. S. STEEL OFF $2.25

A good deal of the selling took place in the concluding minutes of the session, as a result of which the high-speed tickers ran about a quarter of an our after the actual closing.

American Telephone had an extreme loss of $6. Woolworth, American Tobacco "B" and Eastman Kodak lost $4.

Stocks off from $2 to $3 net included U. S. Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas, Southern Pacific, New Haven, North American, Allied Chemical, National Biscuit, Liggett & Meyers "B," Shell Union Oil preferred and Royal Dutch. Norfolk & Western slumped $7.50.

The final quotation on U. S. Steel common was $75.25, off $2.25 net, while American Telephone's closing price was $140.87, or $5.37 under the last sale Friday.

BRITISH BONDS DOWN.

British government bonds and the British pound sterling were subjected to pressure. United Kingdom 5½ per cent issue of 1937 dropped more than $50 a bond of $1,000 par value, touching $960. Last June these bonds sold as high as $1,087.50, and in the past few days have sold above $1,050.

The British pound sterling dropped to $4.84¾, for cable transfers, off a cent from yesterday's close. Efforts were made to sell sterling short, but banks refused to accept short sales.

Selling of sterling reflected growing uncertainty over Great Britain's ability to maintain the current gold parity of $4.86⅝.

Cash Register Is Resuming Paying

National Cash Register Co. has resumed dividend on class A common by a declaration of 37½ cents, payable October 15. Officials say action has been prompted largely by improved earnings, which, since the first of the year, despite losses in the first quarter, are $960,000, September estimated. Net earnings for the third quarter, normally one of the poorest quarters of the year, are estimated at slightly in excess of the proposed dividend.

Bank Clearings in Week Are Larger

Bank clearings, as reported to Bradstreet's, show an increase of 62.4 per cent over the preceding week. This apparently very good showing is mainly due to the Labor Day holiday influences and partly to the increased activity in the New York stock market and to the inclusion in this week's totals of the usual heavy-midmonth settlements. When reduced to a daily average basis, however, this week's total of bank clearings is 2.7 per cent greater than last week.

Aetna-Standard's Operations Better

Improvement in rolling mill machinery purchases, as steel manufacturers seek more economical operations through new equipment, is benefitting Aetna-Standard Engineering Co., says President M. I. Arms. Company's plants are operating near capacity. Unfilled orders will permit maintenance of current operations four months ahead, Mr. Arms says.

Sales of Washing Machines Are Up

Chicago, Sept. 19—August sales of electrical washing machines were 8.5 per cent ahead of July, 1931, and 6.5 per cent ahead of August, 1930, said American Washing Machine Manufacturers' Association, which comprises 27 manufacturers who account for more than 90 per cent of output. Sales so far this year continue ahead of 1930.

Norfolk & Western Protest Hearing

Interstate Commerce Commission has assigned for hearing on Nov. 3 the protest of Norfolk & Western Railway against the commission's tentative findings on excess income.

The commission directed the road to pay the government $15,849,344 in excess net railway operating income, alleged to have been earned from 1924 to 1926 inclusive.

Grains Are Uneven in Chicago Market

Chicago, Sept. 19—Grains were uneven today. Wheat was ⅛c off to ¼c up, corn unchanged to ⅛c down and oats unchanged.

STOCK DIVIDENDS

M. D., Revere—A friend told me to buy some Electric Bond & Share at the present price. Is it a good investment?

Ans.—Electric Bond & Share common is a speculation. Dividends are paid in stock at the annual rate of 6 per cent. Cash value of such payments depends entirely on fluctuations. Net for 12 months ended June 30, 1931, was $1.96 a share against $2.47 for preceding 12 months. Should you care to be conservative, let us know the amount you can spend.

WE CONGRATULATE

Mrs. Samuel W. Huckins, 75 South St., Medford, Mass., Winner of the Free Bungalow Site given in the "STREET-NAMING CONTEST"

conducted through the columns of the Boston American for the purpose of getting the most appropriate name for the first street at

WHITE POND

Concord, Mass.

Her suggestion—"THOREAU STREET"— has been unanimously accepted by the judges of the contest:

Hon. JAMES M. CURLEY, Mayor of Boston
Hon. CHARLES F. HURLEY, State Treas. of Mass.
RAYMOND WHEELER, Esq., Selectman, Concord, Mass.

—and rightfully so, when you recall that it was HENRY D. THOREAU, poet and naturalist, who immortalized this same WHITE POND in his writings. Despite the fact that he traveled extensively in his later life, the charm of WHITE POND stood out pre-eminently in his mind, and was strongly reflected in his works.

It is not to be wondered at! No other spot offers such natural beauty as this sparkling, crystal, spring-fed water, and white, sandy shores, punctuated here and there by a cozy bungalow-camp nestled in the protection of pines and birches.

YOU, TOO, can OWN A LOT here — FOR VERY LITTLE

Prosperity Loans

The State of New York has just marketed $40,000,000 in public improvement bonds AT THE LOWEST RATE OF INTEREST IN THE STATE'S HISTORY.

Of this total sum, $25,000,000 will defray cost of grade-crossing elimination.

Another $10,000,000 will provide for general State improvements.

The remaining $5,000,000 is dedicated to emergency construction—hospitals and prisons.

These are all necessary and highly important projects. Each item represents work that must be done SOME TIME. In utilizing its splendid public credit to do the work NOW, New York obeys the sound economic principle that public projects should be carried on MOST EXTENSIVELY when times are bad, when costs of materials are low and WHEN MEN NEED JOBS.

As recent Federal financing has demonstrated, the Federal Government ALSO has unparalleled public credit for vastly larger sums than any single State can command. The President himself has been an advocate of public works in periods of depression. But such public works as the Federal Government is now carrying on are ONLY A FRACTION of what the Federal Government CAN DO, and the Federal Government OUGHT TO BE DOING ITS UTMOST.

Everybody knows unemployment will prevail all next Winter. The President knows it. He has a big committee in existence for that very reason.

But why doesn't he do something REALLY ADEQUATE?

Why doesn't he call Congress in special session IMMEDIATELY to authorize a $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Loan for Federal public works?

Millions of dollars' worth of materials would be purchased for the public enterprises, stimulating production and PROVIDING MORE JOBS.

The economic activities of the whole nation would be revitalized, and permanent public improvements would remain AS A LASTING BENEFIT after the crisis is passed.

WHY, THEN, DOESN'T THE PRESIDENT ACT?

Veterans and "Tin Cups"

Treating Soldiers as Beggars

General Harbord advises the war veterans of the American Legion not to go to the government "with a tin cup in hand" to ask for complete payment of their adjusted compensation.

It was not a "tin cup" when the railroads collected $800,000,000 in adjusted compensation for their use by the government during the war.

There was no talk of "tin cup" when the war contractors received some six billions of dollars in adjusted compensation for cancellation of their contracts.

The railroads and the war contractors risked their property. And they have been paid, generously and without a murmur of protest.

The soldiers risked their very lives. They gave up their homes and their jobs, to serve for a pittance.

And when they think of requesting the complete payment of an adjusted compensation which is only a fraction of the financial loss they suffered, they are reviled and abused as if they were beggars in the streets.

That Dorchester School

The people of Dorchester must not be surprised if the Boston School Committee rejects their plea for the construction of a new girls' high school so sorely needed in the Meeting House Hill section.

In this matter of school construction, the School Committee has demonstrated that it can select sites, pay for them, adopt plans for immediate construction and then abandon them all with the agility of a trapeze artist in the circus.

It would seem that the last one who gets the ear of the School Committee is the one who gets the favorable decision in these matters.

Just Folks

The Future

Whate'er the future holds in store,
The past we've known has taught us this:
Throughout the years that lie before
There will be pleasures we shall miss,
There will be many hours of care
And tears to shed and pains to bear.

As in the past the days ahead
Will try again the faith we hold.
We'll hear the funeral service read
Time after time as we grow old.
My dear, the farther on we go,
There must be more of grief to know.

Nor can we wisely think or say
The future years will happier be
Than those which now have passed away.
There will be much we'll smile to see.
But in the main I'm sure we'll find
The self-same needs for being kind.

So hand in hand let's fare along
And look at life with open eyes.
Ahead of us lie mirth and song
And little children's happy cries.
And we shall find it good to live,
Though Time has little new to give.

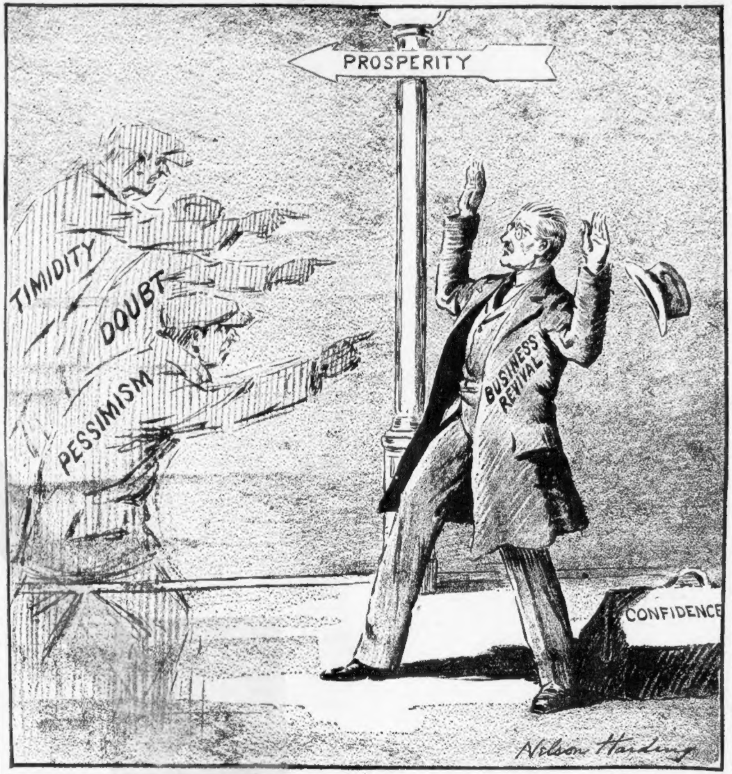
A Phantom Holdup

By NELSON HARDING



Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What the Cops Saw

SHE WAS nineteen, and pretty as only a girl called Ruth Callahan can be.

Elsie Robinson

A gay, soft, little colleen — wild rose cheeks, tumbled curls, starry eyes — is that the picture you're seeing? That's the picture you should be seeing when you think of her lovely youth . . .

But that wasn't the picture the cops saw when, several hours later, they gathered her in! The roses were faded by then—the stars drowned—the curls tangled in a sour mat. Ruth was drunk. Very drunk. Plastered—polluted—spifflicated—soused—drunk. And small wonder! For by actual, official reckoning she had consumed—

Four quarts of ale—
Three gin rickies—
Nine Tom Collinses—
Two highballs—
Several beers.

"How awful!" you cry. "A sweet young girl like that! No wonder we need Prohibition."

Don't worry, stranger. Ruth had Prohibition. And nothing but. That was what ailed her. She was chuck full of Prohibition. She wasn't on an orgy demonstrating Flaming Youth. She was just a Nice—Young—Girl—Doing—Her—Bit- For—Mr. Volstead by soaking up evidence in speakeasies. At a wage of $10 per arrest for evidence thus obtained. And for this service she had the hearty commendation of the United States Government!

Yes, it is true that when these facts were, most inconveniently, made public, they caused quite a commotion. Promptly did Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, national prohibition director, broadcast a porperly official "tut! tut!" But on the next air wave, Andrew McCampbell, prohibition administrator for New York, announced that we mustn't take Col. Woodcock's "tut-tut's" too seriously. And to prove it, allowed another young woman with an equally obliging thirst, to assist his agents in raiding the Surf Club. His explanation deserves a place amongst our Great American Classics.

"IT IS NECESSARY," says Mr. McCampbell, "FOR AGENTS AT TIMES TO TAKE GIRLS WITH THEM IN ORDER TO GAIN ENTRANCE TO SPEAKEASIES."

But not just ANY girl. No, indeedy! They must be NICE girls. Certified NICE girls. Never will your Uncle Samuel permit his picked agents to associate with, or his precious evidence to be consumed by, female rowdies.

"UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES WILL I PERMIT AN AGENT TO USE A WOMAN OF ILL REPUTE. THEY HAVE THEIR ORDERS ON THAT SCORE."

Now ain't that sumpin! The girlie must be good or Uncle Sam won't pay her likker bill. But how long will the same be good AFTER she has consumed four or five quarts of evidence? And who'll be responsible for her damaged reputation when she's carried off the field of battle?

SHALL WE SHORTLY BE GIVING PENSIONS TO FEMMES WHO GET COCK-EYED FOR THE U. S. A.? A SORT OF CROIX DE SOUSE?

Swell idea, isn't it? Looks so nice in print. What a hit it will make with our posterity!

New York Day by Day

A Wonderful Clock

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—If you started off the day trying to brush your teeth with a strip of shaving cream, motored to the country, got caught in a seven hour traffic blockade and had only 15 minutes to turn out a column, what would you do?

Speak up and quit rolling your handkerchief into a little ball. Well, that is what's facing me. And will that tittuppy little squirt with a middle hair part quit biting his nails? I'm so twitchy as it is I'm on the verge of one of my spells. Fifteen minutes—no, thirteen now, and not a thought.

It's somewhat a travesty of fair play that I, who have done nothing but skip through the world scattering sweetness, light and a modicum of cigaret ashes, should have to face such an ordeal. Just sit here in a frenzy of agony. Nothing to encourage me but the gaunt tick-tock of a clock.

By the way, it's funny about that clock. One can look at it and tell the exact time in any part of the world. It is just 4 p. m. in New York. Over in Hawaii it is 11 o'clock. In Berlin it is 10 p. m. And on the Canary Islands—I'm glad they clocked that up—it is 8 o'clock.

Incidentally, will that red headed flapper, smoking a cigarette and reading The New Yorker in the third row stand up and tell us just where are the Canary Islands?—You have been sitting there sneering as though I might be dirt under your feet. And what I know about your uncle!

This is Saturday evening—an evening when most of us cast off burdens of the week and relax. Many of you are having the bath drawn this very moment and in another hour will be plushed up and ready for the Savoy, Plaza, Pierre's, or St. Regis.

Later you may be seeing Harry Richman and Jack Pearl cavort in Mark Hellinger's sketch, "That's Africa!" Or watch the feather-footed Fred Astaire in one of those loping dances. Or maybe see the guest condemned by his doctor to die in Grand Hotel. You fat-heads don't know how lucky you are.

But go ahead. Have a good time, make merry, dance the night away with flying feet. Become satiated with jazz, drink your fill of rotten, manhood destroying hooch, puff nicotine poisoned smoke. Sniff coke, if you want. But remember tomorrow is another day and if you think lugging around one of those hippo headaches is fun, that's your affair. Not mine. Anyway I haven't time to sermonize, I've got to whip out a column.

One thing I might add, however. And that is: As a matter of fact I'll say nothing. Why should I give all of you advice? A heap you care. I can squat here trying to sweat out a column until I petrify and what do you do? Go traipsing off to the restaurant, to the theater and the night clubs. Swigging gin and dancing the polka.

Russia used to be the gayest country in the world—champagne, vodka, peppermint candy, shameless Paris dancers, bestial palace orgies, mad dukes, charades and paranoic duchesses. One long day and night of sensuous pleasures. And you know what happened to Russia, don't you? Give up? Well, they are dumping wheat. That is what they are doing. As a matter of fact while writing this one of them opened the window and dumped a peck of wheat right beside my chair. Yesterday while passing a Russian restaurant I saw the head American dumper and he was in a nasty mood. It wouldn't surprise me if Fifth Avenue found itself itself hip-deep in wheat by Monday. Maybe not Monday, for the Soviet might not permit Sunday dumping, but by the middle of the week anyway. And won't that be ducky?

But a lot you mind. You'd rather listen to Tommy Lyman sing or hear Texas Guinan call you sucker in some woozy night club. Later many of you will be eating sandwiches at Reuben's—sandwiches named for Mrs. Fiske, Jack Osterman and other swells—while I'm here writing in the cause of Art. When I finish this I'll be only a wilted flower. For hours afterward. I just droop around with my tongue out panting, like this—ah! ah! ah! But you wouldn't understand such a creative collapse. Not you! You are too intent on your hellish pleasures.

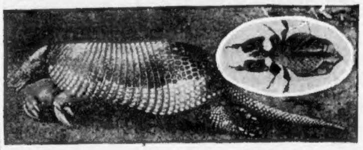
Can Nature Explain Self?

Why Does She Play Jokes on Some of Her Children in a Most Heartless Manner?



ALWAYS SAFE FROM HIS ENEMIES AND ALWAYS HANDICAPPED

The armored giant Armadillo shown here can protect himself against all his natural enemies by means of his tough shell. He can roll up into a ball at the first sign of attack. But why should Nature give protection to such a worthless animal and then make this armored protection such a hindrance in his everyday life?

That is an unaccountable mystery. Nature has played many such "jokes" on animals.

The three-toed sloth is a ridiculous creature. He walks and sleeps upside down. His feet have so developed that he cannot walk on the ground.

Nature played a strange trick on mollusks and other shell fish. After allowing them to develop hard shells to protect themselves against predatory fish she developed the common starfish which can wrap itself around the shellfish and gradually force it open and devour it.

Mother Nature has her best fun with the birds and the insects. Insects are natural food for birds. Birds have remarkably keen eyesight. So sharp are their eyes that they can see their food while on the wing. Nature has provided many insects with the most perfect examples of camouflage.

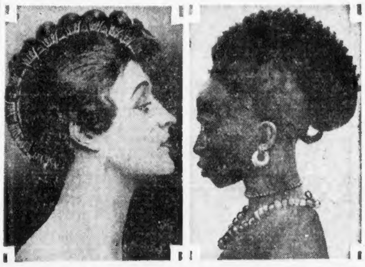
Some insects now resemble bits of twigs or leaves and even the bright eye of a bird does not detect them.

The contest between birds and insects resembles the modern and more familiar contest between arms and armament. The arms-maker invents a new armor-piercing rifle and then the manufacturers of armor-plate create a new plate to stop the projectiles. In baseball, the manager of one team scours the country for a pitcher whom the opposing players cannot hit and the manager of the opposing team strives to assemble the best hitters on his team.

Another thing that has puzzled naturalists and scientists is the enormous bulk of the horns on the moose. Undoubtedly these are weapons by which the moose can fight and defend himself—but they have grown so large that they sometims ensnare the animals in trees and thickets where many north woods hunters have found them starved to death.

Why has the proboscis monkey such an enormous, unwieldy nose? Why does the little animal, called the Madagascar tenrec, have a mouth four times as large as one that would serve him just as well? Such odd equipment does not help these animals to fight their enemies nor help them to make their living.

A feature article in tomorrow's American Weekly in the Boston Sunday Advertiser tells about many of these inconsistencies of Nature.



FROM THE AFRICAN CONGO TO PARIS COMES THIS COCK'S COMB HEAD DRESS

French hair dressers have startled Paris by showing unusual and grotesque coiffures at the French Colonial Exhibition.

Elaborate, lacquered wigs and the cock's comb coiffure, shown here, became fashionable at once. A woman can have several of these savage looking affairs, freshly waxed or lacquered, in her wardrobe, and select the color and shape that suit her moment's fancy when she goes out.

Many forms of feminine head dress have been in and out of vogue for thousands of years.

In the second century, Greek and Roman flappers were shingled in front, but carried a knot of braided hair at the back and sometimes a bang in front.

The very modern "Eton crop" is to be found on a wall painting in an Etruscan tomb of 400 B. C., near Oviteo, Italy.

Every nation has experienced periodic outbreaks in which the women exhibited their hair in unnatural colors.

Men never went in much for towering coiffures—perhaps, because helmets would not fit down over them and a helmet was once the best form of life insurance.

An interesting review of modern and ancient hairdressing appears in the American Weekly in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Capital Silhouettes

THE AMERICAN Bar Association, by a two-to-two vote, come out in favor of prohibition repeal. Who remembers when he used to glance furtively at the little swinging rattan door of the corner saloon and wonder how old he would have to be until, like Lincoln, he was addmitted to the bar?

SENATOR FESS denies he ever said that if the American Legion demanded modification of Volsteadism, Congress would act on it in 60 days, thus depriving himself of a great opportunity before very long of posing as a great prophet.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S reported decision to hold up the construction of the proposed Nicaraguan canal on account of the depression is probably based on the fear that to go ahead with it now would give employment to too many people.
